TO THE EDITOR

Residents of Curry County:
 Your fair board in March voted unanimously to include in the fair budget $70,000 for the purpose of building a 100 foot wide by 200 long clear span all under cover with a 36 x 200 grandstand to seat 2000 people. (The old grandstands are rotting down and need replacement.) This new construction will cost $2.50 per square foot. (This building project will not require special bonding.) We feel these changes are necessary and we are justified for the following reasons:

- A. 90 per cent of the county fair could be held under cover.
- B. The fairgrounds could be used year round (especially during bad weather) for:
 1. Track and field training for high school teams.
 2. Boy and Girl Scout troops could use the arena to receive training in camping and self-preservation (for example).
 3. An excellent opportunity for boxing clubs (as an example) to organize. With good coaching many young men could have stronger bodies and quicker minds, and even more importantly the development of self control (emotionally), respect for the ideas of others (coach and fellow students), and self assurance.
 4. An outstanding chance for the increased development of Curry county's 4-H clubs. Very few people realize what 4-H has contributed to our county, except those who have been actively involved for the past 10 or 20 years. The different projects are almost endless, covering domestic, outdoor and even some training in commercial areas. 4-H offers a rare opportunity for the young people of our county to learn skills they would otherwise have no chance to learn. A surprisingly large number of Curry county's youngsters have benefited from 4-H and the efforts of 4-H leaders. This program needs to be expanded.
 5. Specifically, the 4-H horse clubs and other riding groups need a covered area so that they can keep their animals in shape thru the winter months too. Horse shows could be held under a covered area in winter when business is slack in the county. Each person that can be brought into Curry county will spend an average of $33 per day. If 200 people attended a three day show local businessmen would take in approximately $6,600 per day, or $19,800 for the three days.

This is not a detailed explanation but will shed some light on our reasoning. If you have any questions feel free to contact your fair board. We are more than happy to answer your inquiries.

At this stage of the game, reorganization of school districts probably will remain status quo. Basic school support will be increased moderately, but could provide some property tax relief due to stabilizing enrollment projections. Meanwhile, total bill production tends to enforce the contention the 56th Assembly is playing it "cool."

On May 2, 1967, some 80 Senate bills and 139 House bills had passed both houses for a total of 219 reading for signing by the governor. Of 1,462 bills

On the same date in 1969 some 53 Senate bills and 95 House bills had passed both houses for a total of 148. Of 1,554 bills introduced that session, 710 were passed by both houses.

Walk For Development

Last weekend I joined thousands of Eugene-Springfield area citizens in a project which focused community attention on hunger and malnutrition.

This was the Walk for Development, an international effort in which individuals walk to demonstrate their concern about, and to raise money for, worthwhile projects. Participants secure sponsors who contribute a certain amount for each mile covered by a walker. The money is used to support domestic and overseas self-help projects to combat the causes of poverty. It is estimated that nearly a million individuals in some 300 cities across the nation joined in such walks to raise funds for nutrition education, agricultural assistance, food services for the elderly, and other projects to aid hungry persons.

In the Eugene area some of the funds will go to the Lane Council for the Poor, the ADC Mothers Scholarship Program and the Family Shelter House, with the balance to be used for other national and international anti-poverty efforts.

The Walk was more than a means of raising funds for worthwhile projects. The organizers of these walks are young people, most of whom have never really experienced hunger. Yet their concern for others was so great that the leaders spent many days organizing the effort and thousands of these young people spent long hours walking many miles. Some walked as long as 12 hours to cover the 34-mile course. Blisters and sore feet attest to their willingness to sacrifice personal comfort. Their determination proved inspirational to some of the older walkers who might have preferred a token hike. The Walk required of these young people an individual commitment of time and energy, and it provided a chance to become involved with others in the community who share the same concerns.

It is this personal involvement that I think is the most significant aspect of the program. By pegging their contributions to the number of miles that the walkers actually covered, the sponsors undoubtedly encouraged many walkers to go extra miles. Thus the Walk afforded the sponsors an opportunity for more personal involvement. While it would have been easier simply to collect money, it is this involvement of sponsors and walkers that gives the Walk for Development its special appeal.

We don't yet know how successful the Walk was in terms of money collected, but we do know that it was extremely successful in getting people who cared to do something about a major world problem. In these days of increasing polarization, the Walk provided a way in which young and old came together to work for common goals. It was an outstanding success.

Nada Warren Services Held

Graveside services for Mrs. Nada (Hatcher) Warren, 72, were held at 10 a.m. Wednesday, May 12, at the Port Orford Cemetery. Rev. Harold Best officiated.

Mrs. Warren was born May 26, 1898, in Arizona and passed away at her home here on May 10.

She is survived by her husband John Warren, son, John Hatcher, daughters, Mrs. Clara Miller, Port Orford, Mrs. Lillian Crump, Coos Bay, and Mrs. Aileen Fort, Gold Beach; sisters, Mrs. Lucille Reynolds and Mrs. Erma LeClair, both of Ophir; brother, Earl Barrington, Port Orford; many grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

Gold Beach Funeral Home was in charge of arrangements.

Introduced that session, 638 became law.

On the same date in 1969 some 53 Senate bills and 95 House bills had passed both houses for a total of 148. Of 1,554 bills introduced that session, 710 were passed by both houses.

On May 2 this session 26 Senate bills and 129 House bills had passed both houses for a total of 145. What lends special significance to the statistics this session is the fact bill production progresses apace with 1969 - but more than 2,000 bills have been introduced.

Statistically and realistically it would appear the 56th Assembly's cooler heads will prevail.

He Will Be Missed

Mayor Adolph Windmaier passed quietly away at his home last Thursday morning . . . and with his passing the community lost a good man. A man enthusiastically proud of the community. A man who spent many years working toward its progress . . . until his health forced him to slow down. But even then he accepted the position as mayor . . . because he was dedicated . . . and attended his final meeting with the budget committee last Tuesday after leaving the hospital following several weeks' illness.

When he accepted the mayor's position he expressed the hope that he would live long enough to serve his full term. But time ran out. Windy . . . as most people called him, and he was the first to tell you to do so, was controversial, to say the least. But at the same time he was sincere in his efforts for community progress.

He was a staunch member and 'one man' chamber of commerce, for many years volunteering for the thankless job of secretary. He served in the same position on the fire department for many years, and was a dedicated member of the American Legion and a former city councilman.

His passing will leave a void in the community that will be felt for years to come.

Cool Heads Prevail Producing Positive Legislative Session

Few will argue the 56th Legislative Assembly got off to a "negative" start last January 11.

Four months later, it's just as difficult to find anyone to argue the fact Oregon and Oregonians will be better off because of the work by 1971 lawmakers.

The session's early going was marred by partisan wrangling in the Senate, a deluge of bills, a plethora of pressure groups and polar bear weather. GOP House leadership had declared for no new taxes and it was obvious lawmakers were dissatisfied with Gov. McCall's proposed budget.

After a two-week organizational delay, unheralded John Burns (D-Portland) emerged as a new coalition president of the Senate and Legislators began playing "catch-up."

Sixteen weeks into the session - with adjournment sine die likely within a month, it would appear reason is prevailing and emerging legislation will provide the greatest good for the greatest number.

Local governments likely will wind up "wealthier," by virtue of enabling legislation designed to solve financial problems. Local government also may be more flexible and capable of solving problems on a regional basis.

The Legislature isn't giving anything away to local government. But it is putting the finger on cities and counties to solve their own problems with new tools.

In the realm of natural resources, observers call the 56th Assembly one of the most responsible when it comes to proper utilization of "natural" gifts. And progress in this field is considered an accomplishment in spite of - not because of, environmental extremists.

A new Forest Practices Act is acclaimed as a major step toward environmental protection. Likewise are measures such as the Mining Reclamation Act and laws that would regulate slash burning and create recreation trails.

Employers are expressing continuing concern for the health and welfare of employees and their families by supporting laws that would provide higher workmen's compensation benefits for temporary or total disability, permanent partial disability and dependent children in the event of a worker's death.

On the consumer protection front a Judiciary Committee Deceptive Trade Practices Act appears destined to become law. A combination of two more bills, the act specifically defines a dozen or more unfair trade practices, provides stronger remedies for consumers and stricter enforcement by the Attorney General. It prohibits referral selling, abolishes the holder in due course doctrine and provides a three-day cooling-off period for home solicitation sales.

New unemployment compensation laws provide 13 weeks of additional benefits and likely will produce an 8% increase in the size of benefits.

Environmentally the 56th Assembly is working overtime to control litter, phase out open field burning, provide stronger tools with which to crack down on persistent pollution violators, conform with federal anti-pollution legislation, provide additional bonding for pollution control and solid waste disposal study, preserve estuaries and coastal areas and control nuclear power plant sitings.

Yeoman work of Ways & Means Committee, however, is odds-on favorite for legislative accomplishment.

Faced with predictable revenue shortages, along with those of the Executive Department and many other agencies. Republicans are standing pat on their desire to avoid major new taxes.

A five-cent cigarette tax is likely and lawmakers may tinker with income tax reporting procedures to obtain additional funds on a one-
