

Port Orford Police report

July 18
Police received a report of a person receiving unwanted phone calls of threats. The caller was advised of the process and the case is pending further incidences, and prosecution.

Note: if you are experiencing unwanted calls (other than telemarketers) then part of the statute requires the caller know it is an unwanted call so it's up to you to tell them not to call. Document the date and time you told them, and if the calls persist contact the telephone company and have the caller's phone trapped. The telephone company will then contact us and give us the information relating to the caller and we can then take a criminal case for telephonic harassment. If the call is threatening then call the Sheriff's Dispatch immediately so we can investigate it then.

CCEC utility crew does maintenance
On Wednesday, July 23 the Coos-Curry Electric Cooperative utility crew was out on Elk River Road performing yearly maintenance. "We're changing out that pole," explained CCEC Foreman Jim Hall. "It was really rotten. We've been doing a lot of poles now while it's slow - it's a good time to do maintenance - if you get them now they won't blow down in the winter." Working in the front truck is Paul Sprague, in the back truck is Jesse Hall and climbing the pole is Randy Foster. Hall is shown on the ground to the right.
