EDITORIAL COMMENT

As long as a man tells a woman how pretty she is he making a hit with her.

Laws of fashion are the only ones with no penalty attached that are generally observed.

After a man makes one break about wanting a girl to marry him he seldom gets a chance to make another.

There may be one advantage in not knowing much. You may know so little that you don't even know it.

When you feed a man's vanity he doesn't ask questions about how it is cooked or find fault with the way it is served.

If your pocketbook is in a healthy condition you can find some doctor who is ready to find something about your anatomy that isn't.

We'll wager a reasonable sum that you have been given the devil a number of times and yet can't tell from your own memory what he looks like.

The man who courts a girl who has a small brother has no one but himself to blame if he marries without knowing all of his sweetheart's faults and follies.

You never heard a person say: If I do say it myself," without following it up by saying something nice about himself that no one else would have thought of in a thousand years.

When a bridegroom turns to whisper in his wife's ear that she's all his now, she is just as likely as not looking up at him in a way that seems to say: "You will have to dance to my music now, old man."

An Oregon judge has decided that Oregon brides need not adopt their husbands' names unless they wish to. Now if the same judge will decide that the old man doesn't have to give up his salary unless he wishes to, both sides will be happy.
