EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE FABLE OF THE AMATEUR POULTRY RAISER

Once upon a time in the suburbs of an almost-metropolis, there lived a man who possessed an exceedingly robust appetite for chicken. He ate chicken every time the opportunity came anywhere near presenting itself and he never ceased eating it until the visible supply was exhausted.

After several years patronage of the poultry dealers of the city he decided to raise a crop of chickens of his own. He boasted loudly of it to his neighbors and told them what poor and cheerful idiots they were for not following his example. "Why," he interrogated, "should I give a goodly portion of my income to the dealer, when I have time and space for a poultry yard of my own?"

He purchased a second-hand incubator for six dollars and a big basket of eggs for five. He exchanged eleven dollars for wire netting and posts and ten more for lumber to build a house for the oncoming brood.

When all things were ready he put his hundred eggs in the incubator. He watched them diligently, but in spite of his careful watching, only twenty-five of them became chicks. These he nursed tenderly and fed generously. His feed bill amounted to five dollars and seventy cents.

About the time the fowls were ready for the table a black hearted desperado came under cover of darkness and carried off eleven. One of the neighbors dogs ate three more and two others wandered through a hole in the fence and were killed by a passing auto. The whole of the remaining flock then wandered through the same leak and destroyed a neighbor's flower garden, costing as a result, six dollars damages and fine of twelve dollars for permitting them to run at large.

Nine of the birds finally found their way to the table, and after a careful reckoning their owner discovered they cost him four dollars and fifty cents each, to say nothing of seventy-seven hours work and four bitter enemies.

MORAL—The farm is the place to do your farming.

BILL BOGAN SAYS:

When love is blind why is it that so many fall in love at first sight.

Virtue is its own best reward.

A man with a will is popular with his relatives who hope to be remembered.

Many parents know from their own experience how their children should act.

When a friend rises to great heights we must be content to admire from a distance.

The fellow who feels that he is about to lose is always willing to meet the other fellow half way.

A wolf in sheep's clothing—the person who comes to you for confidential information to peddle.

Talking about the patience of Job, how does it compare with the patience of some wives and their jobs.

A person may walk crooked without being crooked but being drunk all the time is almost as bad.

If the truth were known probably more than half the good people are good for other reasons than because they want to be.

There are no disasters big enough to worry the person who has plenty to eat three times a day and a good appetite to go with it.

A Chicago man boasts that he can talk to monkeys. That's nothing! All that is necessary to do that is to ape the monkeys.

If you have laughed at the stale jokes a man has sprung, he can hardly make fun of you when you ask for the loan of a five spot.

When you pretend to know all about anything you place yourself in a position of not wanting to learn and will soon be a back number.

We imagine that often a girl refuses to show her love for a man because she knows how independent he would act if he felt sure he had her solid. She wants to keep him courting her.

A Eugene, (Ore.) physician has invented a beard killer. One application makes the face as bare as a bald head ever after. The young man who couldn't raise a beard if his life depended upon it can now tell his sweetheart that he has used the beard remover for her especial accommodation.

We live in momentary fear that if Przemysl is battered around much more it will lose the one vowel it has.
