

SUMMER TIME IS TEA TIME

This store is ready as usual with the right goods at the right time.

Buy TETLEY'S TEA from us and prepare it according to the following directions:

DIRECTIONS—In preparing iced tea, the tea is brewed the same as if it were to be served hot. Now, if it is desired to prepare iced tea for prompt use, the liquor should be poured direct from the tea pot into a tumbler of cracked ice. If, however, it is desired to prepare a quantity for use some hours later, the liquor should be poured off the leaves promptly and allowed to cool slowly. After it gets down to a moderate temperature, it should then be stored in a crock or other vessel, in a refrigerator. When it is desired to serve, the liquor can then be poured into a tumbler of cracked ice. Iced tea should, of course, be served with both lemon and sugar.

All wise housekeepers should have a good supply of TETLEY'S ICED TEA constantly on hand during the hot weather. Since the water has to be boiled in making iced tea, it will readily be seen that it is a good, safe drink for the summer time, in addition to the fact that it is naturally the most cooling, refreshing and invigorating beverage known to science. TETLEY'S TEA IS THE BEST—THAT IS WHY THIS STORE ADVERTISES AND RECOMMENDS IT

Dated, Oregon City, Ore., February 17th, 1916.

W. J. WILSON, Sheriff of Clackamas County, Oregon. By E. C. HACKET, Deputy.

ORIENT

Walter Johnson has sold his mercantile interests in Portland and is now in our community. Welcome back Walter.

The farmers are making use of the splendid weather and are doing early farm work.

Overseer Hillyard was on duty putting the roads in shape after the snow left and as in the past is proving himself to be the best road man in Multnomah county. Our roads are in the best shape of any gravel roads to be found and due largely to the care given them by Mr. Hillyard.

Professor C. M. Quicksall and family were business visitors in Portland Saturday.

W. Clawson of the firm of Clawson & Williams, of Orient, made a business trip to Portland Friday and Saturday.

Sunday while "Slim" Smith and Fred Proctor with their families were out joy riding, their machine seemed to kind of get out tune and the old old story repeated again, another machine, a piece of rope and a trip to the auto hospital. Both said never again, but say, you know how that pledge sticks. Just until next time.

The basket ball fans of the community were given an opportunity to enjoy themselves Friday night. Boring boys and girls journeyed to Orient and played the local teams. The Orient girls lost to Boring 9 to 16. Orient lost as a result of inferior guarding due to the lightness of the team which is composed of sixth, seventh and eighth grade girls. The Boring girls were considerable heavier and taller they having a H. S. department to choose from, gave them a decided advantage over the local girls.

The boys game was a landslide for the Orient five. The game was fast and spirited from start to finish but through superior team work Orient was able to score almost at will. W. Hale of Orient was the star player of the evening being 19 times successful from the field but because of fowls called by the referee four of them were not counted.

SECONDHAND GLASS.

Interesting Methods of a Business That Is Quite Extensive.

The salvage glass industry is of such importance and extent that many dealers in secondhand glass specialize in one branch or another. Some, for instance, handle only plate glass that comes to them by reason of the demolition of old buildings, razed to make place for new structures. Salvage glass of this sort brings prices not far below those of new glass.

A considerable quantity of the salvage glass dealer's stock emanates from the plate glass insurance companies. The methods of these companies in taking over glass vary. One concern may keep no stock on hand, simply buying whatever is required to replace a broken pane, disposing of the broken glass, if enough remains to be sold, to the salvage dealer. Sometimes a company will have a warehouse of its own, to which it will remove broken glass that may still be in condition to use. Frequently it will happen that only one corner has been broken from a large pane and that this may be cut down to fit a smaller window.

Most plate glass is insured, but there is much that is not. In the case of an uninsured plate that is broken the owner must, of course, go to a dealer for a new plate. He will sell the broken plate to the salvage dealer. It follows therefore that from insurance companies, from building wreckers and from owners of uninsured glass the salvage glass dealers accumulate great quantities of secondhand plate glass. Much of this is in such a condition that it may be reset anywhere. Should the injury consist, for instance, of simply a deep scratch in the center it is easy to make that plate salable. The secondhand dealer cuts out a strip containing the scratch and thus have left two smaller plates, quite suitable for smaller windows.

When injured plate glass is too much scratched to be available for windows it is sometimes made into ground or frosted glass for office partitions or doors. Salvage plate glass too small for use in windows is employed for the glass doors of refrigerators, and larger pieces are utilized in the making of glass table tops. Small fragments go to the making of hand mirrors, although only clear pieces may be so employed. Other pieces, too small for other purposes, enter into the manufacture of glass signs.

Eventually, when the last piece of merchantable glass has been cut from the damaged piece, there remain the scraps and fragments accumulated in the cutting. Even these have their uses, although they do not bring much. They are melted and used in the manufacture of bottles.—Washington Star.

Charity Begins at Home.

The absentminded Professor Lumpkin is always so shabbily dressed and presents altogether such a broken down appearance that the other day on seeing his own image reflected in a large mirror he drew out his purse to give himself a look.—Lustige Blaetter.

Barnyard Manure.

Barnyard manure has value on the farm aside from that as a fertilizer. It improves the physical conditions of the soil and makes it easier to handle. Its decay produces heat and its presence aids chemical and bacterial processes. Moreover, it absorbs and holds a large amount of water and helps to aerate the soil. The benefits of these indirect aids to plant growth are in some cases worth as much as the fertilizing power of the manure.

These are observations made by F. L. Kennard, agronomist in the northwest experiment station at Crookston, Minn., in response to numerous questions received from farmers.

When it is added that barnyard manure is worth perhaps $2.50 a ton and that each farm animal produces from five to seven tons per 1,000 pounds of live weight each year, it is easy to see that as a fertilizer the material should not be wasted.

The best practice is to haul the stuff directly from the barn to the fields. If this is done there is little loss through fermentation or leaching.
