"For Sandy Always."

Cleanliness and Filthiness.

The Lord does not expect us all to be godly, but He does expect us to be clean—clean not only in person, but in our surroundings.

Now just pause a moment and let's consider this town—not from the standpoint of the kicker, but from that of the well wisher, the builder.

You, reader, are scrupulously clean with your person. You take your baths regularly, you cleanse your hands and face before each meal, you keep your hair neatly brushed, your nails trimmed, and yourself generally both attractive and sanitary.

If you see a person occasionally who is dirty, and slovenly, and filthy, you have little but secret contempt for that person.

The laborer in the street even removes the evidence of his toil when his day's work is over. He emerges a man, intelligent, clean, and sanitary.

So much for the person of humanity. In the homes of our community you will find the same evidence of scrupulous care and attention to the smallest of details. Spotless cleanliness is the word in a majority of homes, while at least adequate cleanliness is almost the universal rule. You expect nothing else, and you find nothing else.

No criticism, therefore, can be made of our homes.

But let us step outside the homes and survey the situation.

Many of the same people who are so immaculate in their persons and so spotless in their homes are little short of slovenly in their outer surroundings. A few are dangerously near to being filthy, and yet appear to have no realization of the fact.

Back yards are strewn with rubbish that should have been burned. Garbage is thrown out in the yard or over the fence, to stink and fester and breed flies and disease. Grass and weeds grow and multiply and become unsightly to the eye. Cleanliness is buried under the evidence of forgetfulness and neglect.

What is said of the back yard may often be repeated of the front yard or lawn, with a few reservations. It, too, is lacking in that scrupulous care given to the person and the home.

The barn? We hardly know how to describe the conditions that sometimes prevail in these places. You have witnessed them, you have seen the millions of flies buzzing around and breeding other millions to spread filth and disease and death. Your nostrils have been offended by the sickening stench. You have turned your head and hurried by in disgust.

You can look around town and find rubbish in every direction. Vacant lots, alley ways, streets, gutters, everywhere an evidence of neglect—because it is the other fellow's lot, and the streets and alleys and gutters belong to the public, and what is the public's is too often nobody's business at all.

But why is it so? Why can we not be as clean and neat in our surroundings as we are in our persons and in our homes? Why can we not observe cleanliness in all ways instead of in a few?

These things are worth your serious consideration, brother, for they have a powerful influence on the future of our town and on the general health of the people.

If you think such conditions when they exist are not a constant menace, ask any doctor. He knows.

There is seldom a happy medium. Generally it is either cleanliness or filthiness, and we don't want filthiness in this town.

Shall we wake up and get rid of such as may now exist in this town?

Or shall we, like the pig, go right on wallowing through it until we die?

Food For The Mind.

Never was there a time in the history of this country when the people at large were as constant and inveterate readers of newspapers as they are today, and this is especially so in the matter of newspaper advertising.

People who a few years ago would hardly look at an advertisement now digest every word in it, and they do it with a purpose. The human mind is crowding and expanding and becoming more liberal. It demands food, and particularly that class of food that conserves the financial interests of the reader. And the well worded advertisement appeals directly to every well balanced mind. It points the way to economy.

And the wise business man advertises accordingly.

Kick the kicker before he kicks you.

Here's hoping we will never have to spank Mexico. One cannot rub up against soot without getting black.

No, no, the prices of printer's commodities are not up in the clouds. They are above the sky.

War or no war, we note with pride that the farmer, like the industrious honey bee, keeps right on buzzing away.

We want an air ship. We want to get up among the clouds and see if we can locate the cost of living.

Mexico is like unto the bad boy who wants to fight but only hangs back for fear he will get licked.

We always did admire a brave man. But, then, timid men invariably do.

The biggest critic is himself the most logical subject of criticism. Don't be a critic.

Be everything that you ought to, and nothing that you ought not to, and by that time you won't be alive.

That Irish rebellion accomplished at least one result aside from its inglorious fizzle. We have heard of the Sinn Feiners, whatever they may be.

Looks like summer might wander along even yet.

Scientists are making war material out of about everything but wind. That, however, is eternally mortgaged to the politicians.

High society has its advantages after all. The fat woman, for instance, achieves the distinction of matronly dignity, while the skinny one is a willow wisp of charming femininity.

Political candidates generally get what is coming to them, but the trouble comes in inducing them to see themselves as others see them.

Yes, wise men and fools keep right on predicting an early peace. But the rest of us prefer to discuss the millennium.
