"For Sandy Always."

There are many things we could do, and ought to do, for the good of this town and adjacent farming community.

There are many things which, if we would do them, would give us a better town and a better community. For instance:—

We might give greater care in the training of our children for the battles of life, as well as the implanting of purely educational knowledge. We might see that the bodies of our children are exercised, and strengthened and developed in a more scientific manner, in addition to their intellects. We might give greater moral and material support to principals and teachers instead of the meagre and half indifferent support that is accorded them now.
We might do these things, and if we did we would have children developing into more intellectual and powerful men and women of the future, and it would be good for the community.

We might encourage each citizen to be more loyal to local interests, and more considerate of each other. You can break a pipe stem with your fingers without difficulty, but it takes an ax or a saw to bring down a tree. And yet time was when the tree was no bigger or stronger than the stem of a pipe. Its strength comes from constant growth and development, just as we as a community would grow and develop if we could only make up our minds to stick together. We ought to do it for our own individual good and for that of the community as a whole.
But loyalty to home interests must be the first and most vital step in our advancement along the road to local prosperity. Without the first step no others can be taken.

We might encourage our women to take a more active interest in the affairs of the town and the rural territory.
The day is past when women are supposed to have no minds above dress or the wash tub. Today they are recognized universally as the mental equal of men in practically every sphere of life. In many respects the average woman is unquestionably our superior.
There then would seem no valid reason why she should not have an equal voice in civic as well as domestic affairs.
Certain it is that if we could inject the strong and splendid personality of our womanhood into municipal affairs we would in time come to see a vast and wonderful improvement in local conditions. We need their aid, their advice, their assistance, and some day we will have it to our everlasting joy.

We might try the experiment of indolging in praise and commendation instead of fault finding and criticism. By commending that which is good in our midst we might unconsciously stimulate a desire in our own minds to improve that which is not so good, in order that it, too, might be commended and praised. The bitterest and most nauseating pill is rendered pleasant and agreeable by a little coating of sugar, and it might be even so with the rough spots in our daily existence. Every great ending has had its origin in a small beginning, and a few humble words of praise might produce results where hours of abuse would fall upon deaf ears.

We might keep right on agitating for better country roads until we get them.
Not only agitate ourselves, but induce our neighbors and friends to do likewise and pass the good work along to their friends, too. If we all agitated and insisted and kept on at it we in time would get what we want, and what is sadly needed in this community. We might do this with lasting advantage to every resident.

We might inaugurate a question campaign. We might ask everyone we meet what can be done to improve local conditions. We might ask them to do the same with others, and keep on asking and absorbing a knowledge of conditions until not a subject remains undissected. We might do this with infinite advantage to everyone concerned, for it would serve to bring into the limelight those defects which are retarding our commercial growth and enable us to advance onward to even more desirable and profitable conditions in the future.

At least Villa and the Crown Prince have proved that dying is not nearly so fatal as it once was.

The Italian campaign has at least shown that the Italians are among the greatest mountain climbers the world has ever known.

Mr. Hearst actually couldn't have been a bit more excited over that Irish rising if he had a cattle ranch over there.

Amato and Paderewski booked for a Sing Sing concert, somehow reminds us of the stars and Stripes.

Statisticians of the agricultural department have not yet reported on the promising crop of June brides.

A good way to get ones mind off the war is to go to a ball game, where all minor considerations are forgotten.

When some historian digs up the assertion that George Washington used profanity, it should be remembered that he had a great deal of provocation and was no mollycoddle.

Carranza is anxious to have relations with this country confined to diplomatic correspondence.

Col. Bryan and Henry Ford may decide to order each other out of the trenches at Chicago and St. Louis.

The New York Irish editors who are calling for a new revolt against England are still here.

"There is a woman's head on our coins" says the Boston Transcript.
Sure. That's why money talks.

Uncle Cannon has reached the mature age of 80, but we fear he will never be old enough to know better.

Samuel G. Blythe tells us that "exaggerated ego" is a "national failing" in Mexico. So different in this country.

We imagine the New York husbands are behind that woman's garment strike. At any rate, they are behind it, if they have a particle of gray matter in their domes.

No matter what he may say or do, the hatred of some of our editors for Lord Northcliffe is simply inexplicable, and here we find one of 'em even referring to him as the Hearst of England.
