There is music in the air. J. B. Jones has bought a new piano.

Robert Lansdown made a trip to the Sandy river Monday to haul a load of gravel for the M. E. church parsonage at Pleasant Home which is now being built.

A move is being made to buy the church building here owned by the Baptists which is now being offered for sale. It is to be regretted that a plan of this kind has to be made in order to keep the church from going into private hands. This church was built largely through the generosity of the people of Cottrell and therefore belongs to the community at large, but if a plan can be carried out it will hereafter be a community church.

An Excess of Nerve.

"I like to see a young man energetic and able to push himself," said the old banker sadly. "But when he borrowed the money from me to buy an automobile in which to elope with my daughter it was carrying things a little too far."

However true the tale may be, the following instance of the display of elephant intelligence is vouched for by a well-known trainer in the employ of John Robinson's Ten Big Shows which are scheduled to give afternoon and evening performances in Portland on May 29th and 30th.

"I was with a big circus a good many years ago working an elephant act. Had two elephants. One of them called 'Solomon' was a very big fellow and I had a very hard time breaking him. But eventually I succeeded admirably. After two seasons with the 'trick,' I went over to another show to work. When I left, the elephant act had to be cut out, as I was the only man that had been able to master 'Solomon.'

"It was twelve years before I saw 'Solomon' again. In the meantime he had never been worked in the ring and had grown ugly. I went up to the old fellow. At first, he did not recognize me. But when I commanded: 'Hey Solomon, lie down,' the animal's eyes sparkled, he pricked up his ears, and immediately obeyed me. I then put him through the same old tricks he had been wont to perform in former days. He executed his stunts with great alacrity. In fact, he was so tickled to see me that he could hardly do his tricks fast enough."

GREAT MARKETS OF PARIS.

Buyers in the "Halles" May Not Carry Parcels of Any Kind.

There are some queer customs and regulations in the "halles," the great Paris central markets. No buyer is allowed to enter or leave the markets carrying a parcel, however small it may be. To carry parcels is the privilege of the porters of these markets. Quaint figures are they in baggy velvet trousers, blue striped jerseys and big brimmed, round leather hats. They alone can be employed to convey from the market to the street outside your merchandise, whether it be half a beef or only a good fat hen.

Madame has to help in her purchases market women known as the keepers. These women sit at the entrance to the main division of the markets and for a small fee watch over all purchases brought to them. Many of these "salesladies" are wealthy. A portly dame, a small seller, wears a fine pair of diamonds in her ears and a sparkling solitaire on her ring finger. Another character at the markets is the "cutter." When a sheep is brought to him by the buyer for half a dozen Paris housekeepers he cuts the animal into six portions and divides it among them. The purchasers draw lots for the best pieces and pay according to value received.—Exchange.
