HE WAS A MAN OF HABIT.

And He Couldn't Break His Routine Even to Be Agreeable.

A couple in a Broadway restaurant were engaged in a conversation which to all appearances was tender as well as confidential when an elderly man walked stolidly past thirty or more vacant tables and sat down at theirs. The couple stopped talking and looked at the man with an icy stare. But the man's mind was not in a receptive state. He calmly studied the bill of fare and ordered his meal.

The woman in the case looked desperate. "Is there no remedy?" she said to her companion.

"None apparently short of actual murder," he replied.

"We might move," she suggested.

"No; let's stick," he said. "I am going to find out why this ill mannered pelican is butting in when there are so many vacant tables."

In slightly modified terms the question was put to the aged interloper.

"I don't mean to freeze folks out," he replied. "This is my table. I have eaten luncheon at this table every day for the last fifteen years. You don't suppose, do you, that I am going to be thrown out of gear at this late day just because you people want to be sentimental? I am a man of habit."

"From people who have habits," said the young man, "good Lord deliver me." And then he ordered the waiter to serve them at another table.—New York Letter in Pittsburgh Dispatch.

ROADS AND THEIR USES.

Likewise Their Materials, and Also Some Sarcastic Comments.

A road is a device of long standing, which in modern times is used for autos to wear out. Roads are also used to raise dust and taxes and kill chickens, dogs and children.

Roads are very common, almost as common as accidents. We see them everywhere. It is quite difficult, indeed, to go any distance without running across one.

Roads are made of various materials. In the northern part of this country they are made of bluestone and macadam. In the southern part they are made of mud. Of the two kinds of material the mud is likely to be more durable, which, as the Scripture so beautifully expresses it, "sticketh to one like a brother."

Roads are not always friendly with each other, and, although they can be seen constantly mingling together, they are likely to be cross. When a road enters a city it becomes puffed up with importance and is then known as a street, a boulevard or an avenue.

Life in cities, however, in spite of the society, is not always agreeable to roads, which are then likely to be afflicted with various diseases, among which we may mention gaspripitis, telegraphitis and graftonomy.—Life.

How Big Was the Baby?

I had heard great stories about the pyramids, but after seeing the stones at Baalbek those of the great pyramid looked like children's building blocks. In the quarry is a stone on whose upper surface a troop of cavalry could stand (if it were a small enough troop).

It is squared on four sides, but is not yet detached from mother earth.

The crude Arab story has it that a female giant was carrying it when she heard her baby cry. She dropped it there, and no one has moved it since. If that baby hadn't drawn its mother's attention from her work there would be today in the walls of the temple a stone seventy feet long and fifteen feet square. It is a large stone and will no doubt some time justify the amount of work that has been done on it. At present it helps six hotels, a dozen curio shops, a score of muleteers and a station master.—Christian Herald.

Dickens and Women's Clubs.

There is a certain connection between Dickens and the origin of the "women's club" movement in the United States which will interest his admirers. The New York Press club in 1868 ventured to give a dinner to him and to exclude all women workers on the newspapers of the city. The affront was felt keenly. It led straightway to the organization of a women's club called Sorosis, of which the chief members were press women, among them Jenny June Croy, Kate Field and Alice and Phoebe Cary. The success of Sorosis was such and its influence in expanding the range of women's interest and influence was so marked that it at once had imitators.—Christian Science Monitor.

Marriage and Mathematics.

"Yes," said the old mathematician, "I've always looked at it that way. Marriage is addition, when the little ones come it's multiplication, when dissension comes up to cloud the horizon of their happiness it's division, and when the final parting comes it's subtraction."

"And how about divorce?" asked the listener.

"Oh, that would come under the denomination of fractions."

When He Was Bad.

It has been said that you never know a man till you travel with him, and certainly traveling has a tendency to bring out all the depravity innate in human nature. Out of this test, however, Benjamin Disraeli emerged with flying colors. This is what was said of him by Mrs. Austen, who, with her husband, traveled with him when he was quite a young man, as related in Mr. Monypenny's biography:

"Your brother," she says (the letter was addressed to Disraeli's sister), "is so easily pleased, so accommodating, so amusing and so actively kind that I shall always reflect upon the domestic part of our journey with the greatest pleasure. Your brother has behaved excellently, except when there is a button, or, rather, buttons, to be put on his shirt; then he is violently bad, and this happens almost daily."

POULTRY NOTES.

Hens need exercise during warm weather. If they are confined in close quarters dig up a few rods of the runs and keep the ground moist so the layers will scratch. Feed them grain in litter and make them scratch it out. This will afford exercise.

The incubator has many advantages, but none are more apparent than that it does not transmit lice to the young chicks. Old Biddy does, and that is one reason why she should be kept busy laying while the incubator hatches her brood.

Hens naturally like a dark place in which to lay, and such a place can be provided by a box tight on all sides, into which is cut a hole large enough to admit the hen easily about four inches from the bottom.

A small piece of camphor about the size of a grain of rye daily and ten drops of camphor or turpentine added to a pint of drinking water is said to be a good remedy for the gapes.
