"For Sandy Always."

Paying Other People's Bills.

When you contract a bill in commercial life you pay the debt and do not ask others to pay it for you.

The same, however, cannot be said of congress or the government of the United States.

There are thousands of men serving in the National Guard regiments on the border who have left families or dependent relatives behind without the necessary means of sustaining life while the brave winner is away serving his country.

In many cases the business employers of these soldiers have voluntarily been paying their employees their salaries while they are with the army. In such cases the families do not suffer, but it is a hardship on the employer.

In other cases the families are supported by local contributions, which amounts to nothing less than charity.

IS THIS RIGHT?

Should the government of the United States, the richest nation in the world, expect the dependent families of its soldiers to be supported by private charity or starve to death?

IT IS NOT.

As it stands today a few patriotic employers and private citizens are bearing the burden that should be placed upon the shoulders of all of the people through means of general taxation.

When the welfare of the nation requires the placing of an army in the field the expense of such an army of every nature, should be borne from the public funds, and no individual citizen should be asked or expected to pay more than his just portion.

It is within the power of congress to right this wrong if it so desires, and for the sake of our young men in the ranks, of their families at home, AND FOR THE SAKE OF COMMON DECENCY, it is to be hoped that for once congress will not shirk its plain duty.

"What Do You Know?"

How many times have you been asked that identical question by the editor of this paper? Too many times to remember, perhaps.

Now let us suggest that you change the accepted order of procedure for one that would be a vast improvement.

Instead of waiting for us to ask you, suppose you just take the initiative and tell us, or write us or phone us what you know in the nature of news.

That little piece of information you have revolving around in your cranium may not be of great importance to you, but to others it may be of vital interest—may even be of considerable value.

Every piece of news you read in this paper we have received from some source or other. The efforts of these people make the paper of greater interest and value to you.

Now suppose you reciprocate and do as much for them. Tell us what you know.

When A Fellow Knows It All.

There are but few country towns in existence but what have some one or more persons who "know it all." That is, they fondly imagine they know it all and most people give them credit for being better posted on everything and everybody than their neighbors are.

But are they?
The fellow who is a "know it all" is also most generally a free talker. He trades information for information, gossip for gossip, and scandal for scandal.
Thus it is that he is often able to impart unimportant information to his associates in a "strictly confidential manner," giving the impression that he has been in close touch with the powers that be.

But when you sift it down he has simply passed along, with embellishments of his own, information that is more or less of a public nature, and which would have reached the public in the usual routine in the course of a few days.

As a matter of fact, the Know it all man seldom knows in advance of the really important affairs of life or of the commercial world, for no one cares to impart such information to the one who knows it all, for in all probability he knows less than you.

Several years ago a cumbersome contrivance on two wheels made its appearance and created a furore of ridicule, laughter and jeers. It was the bicycle. It was called a rich man's toy and a mollycoddle's plaything and a short life was predicted. But the prophets were at fault, the bicycle became the greatest craze of its day, and now is in general use as a practical necessity for people who find it necessary to cover ground hurriedly and yet can not afford the more expensive means.

A few years later another ugly looking monster puffed and snorted and rattled its way into public notice, leaving in its wake a streak of smoke and foul smelling odors. It was the automobile, and it, too, was greeted with wild shouts and grimaces of ridicule.
The wise and the unwise both predicted its failure as a practical vehicle of motive power. Yet the millions in use today testify to the falseness of the greatest of our prophets.

A few weeks ago there appeared in one of our Atlantic coast ports a great and powerful merchant submarine. It came from Germany and had nosed its way beneath the surface into neutral waters despite the watchfulness of the warships of the allies. Another furore was created and the newspapers were filled with accounts of the wonderful craft that had made its way across the Atlantic with a cargo of goods. Again the prophets see failure ahead, but there are those who believe the Deutchland to be but the harbinger of a great fleet of underwater craft capable of conducting commercial relations with other countries irrespective of blockades or enemy ships of war.

These few instances but illustrate the fact that the ingenuity of man is yet in its infancy, that the surface of scientific discovery has scarcely been scratched, and that our children and our children's children will look back upon 1916 as we think of the Dark Ages, when the mind of man was sleeping in its cradle of lethargy.

TO SETTLE LABOR DISPUTES.

Federal Body Should Fix Railway Rates and Wages.

Baton Rouge, La.—Commenting on the prospective railroad strike for higher wages, the Times says:

Congress should pass an act at once giving the interstate commerce commission authority to settle the labor disputes, just as it has the right to fix rates.

It is more important that the interstate commerce commission have the right to fix wages and settle disputes than it is that it have the right to determine freight rates and prohibit rebates.

Business can hobble along under high freight rates. Death would follow a general railroad strike.

Both the railroads and the railroad men may be able to withstand a strike, but the public cannot. The public is not in a position to face a general strike of the railroads in the country.

The calamity is too awful to contemplate.

It would be more frightful than a dozen Mexican wars. It should not be in the power of a set of men to bring such a disaster to the public.

The commission has the right to say what the railroads shall charge for their service.

This commission should be given the right to say what they shall pay for the labor that it takes to perform this service.

And it should be given this authority at once.

Saving the Suffix.

Rex Beach tells how in the early days of the gold excitement in Alaska there came a young German from Illinois who, after prospecting for awhile, settled in Sitka.

His name was Henry F. Almond-inger, and, wishing to Americanize himself as much as possible, he applied to the proper authority for permission to change his name to Henry F. Almond.

A few days later a man named John Smith applied to the same authority, and, after reciting a long catalogue of the ills to which he was subject owing to his unfortunately common name, he said in conclusion:

"And whereas I have noticed that you have curtailed the name of Henry F. Almondinger to H. F. Almond and have not disposed of the 'inger' which seems to be lying around loose, I respectfully request that the same may be added to my name."—Chicago Tribune.
