The children of 1400 rural Oregon school have been using lessons on the fight against tuberculosis as texts in their class work during the past year. The lessons were furnished free by the Oregon Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis or a part of its work.

Now they are organizing to help the Red Cross Seal sale of the Association so that this method of disseminating information may be continued and the association be strengthened in its campaign to exterminate the dread disease in this state.

Acting under the formal approval and permission of the Board of School Directors, the children of 52 Portland schools will also join the big movement.

Last year the children secured $775.74 from the sale of Red Cross Seals. It is expected that more than $1000 will result from their enthusiastic work this year. Their effort will be made principally during "Tuberculosis Week."

This comes December 3 to 10, reaching a climax with "Tuberculosis Sunday", December 10, when every pulpit in the state is asked to join the campaign by recounting progress and repeating the warnings against the disease.

The Association has sent a letter direct to the children of each school. It tells how to proceed. It tells them why the work is so much worth while. It tells them the story of Danny.

Danny had a penny. It was a bright, shiny, new penny. He took it to school. Instead of spending it for a stick of candy he bought with it a Red Cross Seal. Danny knew a boy who could not run or play because he had what was called tuberculosis. Teacher said the Red Cross Seals were sold to help this boy and to tell other boys and girls, and grown people, too, how to keep well and strong and happy.

He put the seal on his desk. As he looked at it, the picture of Santa Claus seemed to grow larger. Santa seemed to wink, seemed to smile. Then he stepped out of the seal. He took Danny on a wonderful ride behind his reindeer.

Danny saw tiny germs cause tuberculosis. He saw a boy who whined when told to go out in the fresh air and play. He almost ran over a sunbeam that was bound earth-ward to kill the germs. He saw the building where the multitude of pennies given by boys and girls were being assembled to use their united power against the disease. Suddenly Danny found himself back in the school. But he was glad that with his penny, the only penny he had, he had bought a Red Cross Seal.

A Profitable Reduction.

The capitalist knew that the new company was spending too much money; also he knew that in some way they had got to put a stop to it. So anxious was he to reduce expenses that he offered his private secretary $25 a month extra if he could find a way to cut down current expenses.

The young man overhauled his accounts, but he failed to find a single expense that could be judiciously cut down. Just as he was about to give up the promised increase in salary it occurred to him that he was already getting $80 a month. Brimming over with enthusiasm, he sought the capitalist.

"I have found a way," he said. "You can save $10 a month on me. I have taken that amount off my salary."

It took the capitalist just about a tenth of a second to see that the young man was still $15 a month ahead, but the bargain stood.—New York Times.

Venice.

Venice became a maritime power in 1158. In the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries she was mistress of the seas.

Historic Pawnee Rock.

A short distance north of Pawnee Rock station, Kansas, is a high southward facing cliff of sandstone known as Pawnee rock, projecting as a rocky promontory from the broad ridge that forms the north side of the valley. The elements and the hand of man, says a report of the geological survey, have made great changes in its size and appearance since the days when the Santa Fe trail passed along its base. Here there were many encounters between the savages and the whites and also between hostile bands of Indians, for the place is noted not only in pioneer history, but in Indian traditions as well. Names and initials of many travelers, from the early trappers and the "forty-niners" to the later army detachments, have been scratched on the smooth faces of the ledges.

His Bad Break.

"Why on earth do you come to me to borrow money, Billups?" said Harkaway peevishly. "Why don't you go to Jorlocks? He's the prosperous looking member of our set."

"That's just it, Harkaway," said Billups. "Jorlocks looks so very prosperous that I am quite sure he spends every penny he makes, but you, old man—why, you dress like a man who saves his money."

P. S.—He didn't get it.

A Roast Rectified.

"I always try to attend to my own business," said the self approving man. "That's jes' what folks are talkin' about," replied Farmer Cornstossel. "Tendin' to your own business ain't what we lectured you to the legislature fur."—Washington Star.

Wrong Interpretation.

A city official tells of a conversation he and a Spanish maiden had when he was a sergeant with troops stationed on the island of Porto Rico.

"The senorita," said the official, "had become infatuated with a certain soldier named Harry, and she had learned his name. One morning she approached me and asked:

"Where Harry?" "He was asleep, and I laid my head on my hand and closed my eyes to tell the girl. She misunderstood the signs and, with a cry, pointed to heaven. I shook my head and pointed down. The senorita raised her hands in silent supplication. Later Harry was seen on guard, and the girl looked at me reproachfully."—Indianapolis News.
