"For Sandy Always."

As the Editor sees it.

Congress wanted an extra session, and now they have it. The president has summoned them to meet on April 2. We who remain at home and do the voting are hoping that they will reverse the prevailing order of things and do something instead of nothing. We are even expecting them to climb to the sublime heights of proving themselves statesmen instead of mere politicians. We are even wagering that at least a majority of them will evince at least a reasonable degree of loyalty to their own country. And for all of which, WHEN WE SEE IT, we will give thanks and send them back again.

The man who owns a vacant lot adjoining the one on which he lives and allows that lot to run to weeds is literally burning up money. If he is so eternally averse to gardening, he could easily keep a hundred or two laying hens thereon, and within a year or two retire with a million. But, then, only a cross eyed man can see the end of his nose.

Any one can "hang out the flag," of course. But how many will follow it?

This censoring the American press may be advantageous, but it has its drawbacks as well. Under its operation even the wildest of the yellow journals can not scare up more than a dozen war thrills a day

About the only thing that will protect the potato planter from indictment this year for destroying currency, is the fact that spuds do not as yet bear the government stamp.

The secretary of agriculture says there is no food shortage. The secretary is a gentleman, but if he will examine the editorial larder he will learn that he is the goldarnedest liar this side of purgatory. We couldn't tell a bigger one ourself.

Fellow dropped into the local bank yesterday, and after looking carefully in every direction withdrew a valuable package from his pocket and shoved it at the cashier. "Put it in the safety vault, quick, and give me a receipt," he hoarsely cried. The cashier gingerly unwrapped the package, took one look ---and fainted. It was a spud.

Even if nothing worse transpires, some traitors in this country are likely to be taught the value of respect for the flag under which they get their bread and butter.

Between providing luxuries for the inner man and the outer woman, this life is just one long wail of bills.

Scientists tell us the sun will shine only 15,000,000 years longer; Get a hustle.

When a ba-hful fellow pops the question and she promptly snaps him up, he begins to wonder what in thunder he ought to do next.

The war, after all might have been worse. Only 5,000,000 men have been killed thus far, with 10,000,000 or so minus legs, arms, eyes, and other portions of their anatomy. Yes, it might be worse.

We note, however, that our brethern of the press are consistently mum on the subject of civilization. So are we, for we never lament over a dead dog.

"Eggs shaved two cents," says an exchange. Gosh! We always thought those storage companies kept them until they grew beards, and we have the proof

No, Julia, we have never known a trust yet that could be trusted.

The bum actor is the only person we know of who has cause to approve the high price of eggs, for no man cares to hurl a fortune at another these days.

"Food Prices Take a Tumble," says a headline. Another fake!

While preparing for war on a larger scale, let's not forget to swat the fly. He's little, but he's loud.

Health authorities predict that the habit of riding in automobiles will make Americans a legless race. We have noticed a tendency in that direction, especially as it relates to pedestrians.

Congress proposes to dam the Mississippi at a cost of $40,000,000. We'll agree to damn it and congress both for half that sum.

"Mexicans submitting to the bath," says a southern dispatch. Impossible---don't believe a word of it!

A motion picture camera has been perfected that will take 400 separate pictures between the first and second shots of a quick firing pistol, and we're going to have one. We've hopes of getting a snap shot at some of our delinquent subscribers rushing in to pay up.

Why, we wonder, does Mr. Ellison seek to muzzle the press and yet allow the congressional tongue to keep right on wagging?

We can't blame you, Willie, for being somewhat ashamed of your old dad, and we sympathize deeply with you in having him wished upon you. He deserves your harshest censure for his many shortcomings, principal of which was his rank failure in raising a son.

The old threadbare trick of auctioning off an automobile as a means to getting rich quick has been kicked into the discard. An egg commands much higher prices.

If we have to raise a great army there will be one grand rush to enlist, for soldiers are fed on Spuds and Beans.

L. E. HOFFMAN

His Trademarks.

Little redheaded Johnny got a job as office boy for the president of a large western railway. After he had been upon the job several days they gave him a form to fill out with his "Personal Record."

When young Johnny came to a particular paragraph that said, "Have you any visible marks for identification in case of accident or death?" he rose from his chair and rushed over to a mirror near by to give himself a general inspection; then he returned to his task and wrote as his answer to this personal query, "Nothing except freckles."—Youth's Companion.

WATER PORTERS OF QUITO.

The Funny Way They Have In Delivering Their Liquid Load.

About a fountain in one of the principal squares of Quito, the capital of Ecuador, assemble every morning the city's aguadores. These water porters differ from the less energetic ones of some South American cities in carrying their jars upon their backs instead of on the backs of mules. Their earthen jars are deep, have a wide mouth and hold about forty pints.

The porter carries it on his shoulder fastened with leather straps. He never detaches himself from his jar either to fill it or to transfer its contents to that of his customer.

He turns his back to the fountain so that the jar comes under one of the jets of water and listens to the sound of the water in the jar, and his ear is so well trained that he always walks away at the exact moment when it is filled to the brim.

Arriving at the house of a customer, he goes to the household jar, makes a deep bow and disappears behind a torrent of water. Foreigners can never receive without laughing the visit of their aguador, the respectful little man who bows to one behind the cataract of water.—Los Angeles Times.

That's Different.

"What's the matter with me, doctor?"
"You have a stitch in the back."
"Dear me, that is prosaic. I can't tell my stylish friends. They would laugh at me."
"This is one of the fashionable new stitches."—Pittsburgh Post.
