"For Sandy Always."

Deliver Us from Hate

There is one vital point upon which we as citizens must guard ourselves in the great contest before us, and that is, that there grow not up in our hearts a spirit of hatred toward those in our midst with foreign blood in their veins.

We have said that we are not to prosecute a war of revenge, but a contest for right and justice. This sentiment comes easy enough at this time. The danger will come later, when the real shock of war is felt and grim death fans us with his sable wings as he takes a son from this home and a husband or brother from that one.

Americans can not afford to harbor hatred, and especially can they not afford animosity toward our citizens of foreign descent. If the citizen of Tu tonic blood is loyal to our country, though he grieve at the necessity of war with his fatherland, his burden is heavy enough without the added knowledge or suspicion that he is viewed with antagonism and distrust.

There are some who are unquestionable traitors to the land of his adoption, but they will soon come their just end. Time will efface them. But their acts should not prejudice in our minds those who are loyal and who are staunchly supporting the government, even though it be with hearts saddened by regrets.

If Americans are even approximately true to their ideals they will not permit the loyal to suffer for the acts of the disloyal. To do so would be to defeat the very aim in view in the struggle before us.

We now are impelled by one consuming desire, the freedom of humanity in its broadest sense, and the greatest freedom to which we can attain is freedom of heart from rancor and bitterness.

No great cause was ever won without martyrdom. Some must suffer greatly, all must suffer some. It is nature's way in which she works out human redemption. But if bitterness and hatred is permitted to creep into the martyrdom and suffering, their uplifting and purifying influence is nullified.

Let us pray to be delivered from all bitterness, that when the contest is ended even our foes may be brought to the light as we see it.

A subscriber writes to know if we ever saw a perfect man. Does the geek think we have no mirrors in our home?

Pay up your subscription, brother. We want to buy a Liberty Loan bond.

The Russian government apparently is in a quandary. It wants to know who is the government.

If you can't swat the kaiser you can at least swat the fly.

Thrifty housewife. "Billy, Billy, come quick—I've found a spot! Now we can pay off the mortgage!"

Up with the cuss who wants to down the government. The stouter the limb the longer he'll swing.

The government has just contracted for seventeen million dollars worth of shoes. Gosh! We need a pair.

Having kicked their masters out, the Russian people are up against an even harder job in kicking themselves in.

Twenty-five butter and egg speculators have just been indicted in Chicago. Give 'em twenty years apiece!

For once we are perfectly willing to see congress remain on the job—until they provide for jailing or hanging the food hog.

Looking for a wife, young man? The czar has three charming daughters who are quite available with no takers.

Soon many of our young men will be hunting the trenches in France, while others will be ogling the pretty girls at the bathing beaches. Yes, there's a difference.

Keep right on digging. Every lick means another bite.

Senator Lewis advocates hanging for the food hog. Got a rope!

Keep smiling. That scowl will not keep you out of the trenches.

Alien citizens of allied nations should not be allowed to remain in safety while our own men are sent abroad to fight. Put 'em in the army or send 'em home.

Where We Aim.

William Dean Howells in one of his talks about literature said: "Good literature is always condemned on its first appearance. That is because, being original, it is new and strange. Shelley's work was bitterly condemned at first. So was Coleridge's. So was Wordsworth's. So was Stephen Crane's." Mr. Howells paused, then added impressively, "Stones are only thrown at those trees which are heavy with fruit."

EARTH'S ATMOSPHERE.

Something About the Sea of Air In Which We Live.

We crawl about on the bottom of a sea of air. Only very recently have we learned to swim in it. We call the performance "flying."

The gaseous mixture composing this ocean of air is so fluid and transparent that we hardly realize its presence. Doubtless fishes in like manner are not conscious of the water in which they swim.

But the air is much denser than we imagine. A small child blows up a toy balloon. Probably the air inside the inflated rubber bag is at a pressure of no more than two atmospheres, yet the balloon has become in effect a solid object. A cubic foot of air weighs considerably over an ounce. A dry goods box three feet cube will contain two and one-half pounds of air. This means, of course, at sea level.

As one climbs a mountain or goes up in a balloon the air becomes thinner, its density diminishing steadily until perhaps 150 or 200 miles from the surface of the earth there is virtually none of it left. It is reckoned that one-half of the entire bulk of the atmosphere is below the three mile level.

The sea of air is a warm sea, conserving the heat delivered by the sun upon the earth. If it were suddenly removed we should find ourselves exposed to the cold of outer space (468 below zero F.) and would be frozen.—Philadelphia Press.

Mastered the Servant Problem.

An article in the Woman's Home Companion says that 92 per cent of the women in this country do all their own work, and the writer adds that her particular domestic problem has been solved by a scientifically planned and pretty kitchen that serves as a dining room also. Numerous devices and innovations have been contrived by her that make this room artistic and attractive as well as useful. "We think that for us we have eliminated the servant problem," she declares, "for to my mind if one's life can be so planned that daily wants are reduced to the minimum and efficient agencies by which to supply those wants raised to the maximum the entire problem has been met and solved."

Concerning Fresh Shaves.

"I always feel more satisfied with life after getting a nice, fresh shave," observed Bromidus Vane. "So do I," acidly answered Joshua Lott, the ungentle cynic. "In fact, whenever I get a shave I insist on getting a fresh one. Nothing irritates me more than to have an old, shell-worn shave palmed off on me. This would be a gladder world if stale, second hand shaves and expressions could be banished together."—Lamb.

Misdirection of Efficiency.

Is the art of efficiency by any chance misdirected—misdirected toward products as an end in itself instead of toward the development of vitally initiative human individuals, joyous workers to whom product is a byproduct wealth an incident; men who for the very joy of the working work explosively?—Industrial Management.

Tongue Could Tell.

"Last night, George, you told me you loved me more than tongue could tell and, oh, George, that wasn't true!" "Why, darling, what do you mean?" "I mean that it wasn't more than my little brother's tongue could tell. He heard it all!"

USING A MEDICINE DROPPER.

The More Slanting It Is Held the Bigger the Drops Will Be.

When using a medicine dropper it is important to use it correctly, especially if measuring out drops of some powerful medicine like strychnine, morphine or arsenic, for drops vary widely in their size.

Dr. R. P. Garrow of London recently reported to the Lancet the results of some experiments he had made with a medicine dropper and a simple solution. He measured the solution very carefully and then took it all up into a medicine dropper, from which he turned it, drop by drop, holding the dropper at different angles and counting the drops as they fell.

With the dropper held vertically (at an angle of 90 degrees with the horizontal) its contents made 100 drops. Held at an angle of 50 degrees its contents made eighty-two drops; at 20 degrees they made sixty-eight drops, at 10 degrees they made sixty drops, and held horizontal they made only forty-eight drops.

In other words, the drops become progressively larger as the dropper is moved from the vertical position. A drop from a dropper held at an angle of 50 degrees is one-quarter larger than normal; thus, if the nurse has to give sixteen drops and holds the dropper slanting she is really giving twenty. And the more slanting the dropper the bigger the drops.

FALLS ONLY TO RISE.

An Experiment With a Sort of Perpetual Motion Effect.

A novel experiment in the demonstration of perpetual motion is to be performed simply. A glass beaker about six inches high and four inches in diameter is filled with water to the height of about four and a half inches, and two and one-half to three ounces of commercial aniline are added, which will sink to the bottom of the vessel.

The temperature of the beaker and its contents is now raised to 170 or 175 degrees F. by means of a burner, when it will be observed that the aniline will rise to the surface of the water, from which it will hang in a mass of curved outline. Almost immediately the suspended aniline commences to alter in shape, and gradually a large drop an inch or more in diameter detaches itself from the mass and falls through the water.

And now, the detached drop having fallen to the bottom of the beaker, comes the surprising part of the experiment. The fallen drop is seen gradually to rise to the surface, where it joins the mass from which it previously broke away. At once another drop commences to form and, having become detached, falls and rises in the same manner as the previous drop.

So long as the temperature of the water is maintained at 170 degrees or over this procedure continues.

The Chinese "Five Kings."

"The Five Kings" is the name of the sacred book in which is incorporated the religion of the Chinese as well as a great number of other peoples of the orient. The doctrine is a complex system of moral, social, political and religious teaching built up by Confucius on the ancient Chinese traditions, and although its author lived more than five centuries before the birth of Christ, it is still perpetuated as the state religion of the Chinese down to the present day. Confucianism is a religion without positive revelation, with a minimum of dogmatic teaching, whose popular worship is centered in offering to the dead, in which the notion of duty is extended beyond the sphere of morals proper so as to embrace almost every detail of daily life.

Right Thinking.

The quality of your friends is the quality of your thoughts. Think the thoughts of a thief and thieves will be your companions. Think clean, helpful, creative thoughts and surely your associates will be clean, helpful and creative. You attract to you what belongs to you.

Changed Ideas.

Circumstantial Evidence.

"What makes you think all women hate each other?" "Because a woman so seldom brings up a son fit to be another woman's husband."—Exchange.
