One hundred and fourteen dollars was raised for the Red cross at the picnic held at Firwood. A splendid account will appear in the next issue.

Miss Sadie Orr-Dunbar, executive secretary of the Oregon association for the prevention of Tuberculosis and Miss Cronin visiting nurse for the association lectured to a large and appreciative audience last Thursday evening. It was under the auspices of the Woman's club and adds another item to the long list of intellectual treats that the town has enjoyed through the efforts of this very worthy organization.

Owing to changed business conditions throughout the country wholesalers are now practically demanding cash from our local merchants. With each bill of goods they send what is known as a "trade acceptance," which virtually amounts to a sight draft on our local merchant. From this it is evident that the retailer must do business on a cash basis or, at least, cannot afford an account over thirty days, if they, in their turn, can ever hope to meet the conditions instituted by the wholesaler.

President's Report.

Mrs. Shelley, President of the Woman's Club, gives a Review of Year.

TO THE OFFICERS AND MEMBERS OF THE WOMAN'S CLUB OF SANDY

The year just closing has been marked by unusual activity and harmony in our own little circle. No member but has done her share intelligently, financially and physically. The Committees have worked together nobly for the good of all concerned, and to-day the Woman's Club of Sandy stands on a better footing than it ever has before. I can only repeat what I have said so many times in my annual report, that as long as we work in harmony, free from dissension and strife, just so long will we be a power for good in the community. We have accomplished many things in the past, and as the years roll by, many new fields will be opened to us, greater things are awaiting us, and this little organization of women will have been woven into the life, heart and soul of this community to such an extent that our influence will go out in all directions, in undreamed of places and in unheard of ways. Feeling this and knowing that we must stand for the best there is in life, let us in the future, exercise a more strict censorship over our lives, putting away the petty quarrels, judging our neighbors more kindly or better still, leaving the judgement to the One higher up. Let us strike forever from our vocabulary, "Well I wouldn't do that." The human mind is a complicated piece of machinery and one never knows how it will work under certain conditions. And again let us take a firmer stand for the purer, sweeter cleaner things of life. Oh! can't you realize that if each individual will make her thoughts, her actions, her speech, just a little nearer the Christ standard each day this Club will be an irresistible force for good. Each year binds us closer together, gives us a better understanding of each others faults and virtues, makes us more fully able to cope with difficulties as they come, and in the coming year, whatever our cross may be, let us glorify it; let us make of our work, a wonderful privilege, let us touch hearts and hands a little closer, and in concerted organized movement, with heads erect, keeping perfect step, march thru the year to the victory that awaits us.

Respectfully submitted,
Blanche R. Shelley, President.

FATAL ACCIDENT.

A terrible accident occurred last Wednesday at Hogan—a small station near Gresham on the P. R. L. & P. line—as a result of which three people lost their lives. Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Lindsay and granddaughter, Helen Metzger were returning home from a visit with their daughter when the machine was struck by the fast mail Estacada bound. It was struck squarely on the side and dragged about 400 feet. Mr. Lindsay was killed instantly, Mrs. Lindsay died while being rushed to Portland. Miss Metzger lingered a few hours dying this morning. She was a cousin of F. L. Proctor and Geo. and E. Beers of this town.

The Woman's club held its last meeting for the club year at the club room last Thursday. The following officers were installed for the coming year: President, Blanche R. Shelley; Vice-president, Edith Esson; Secretary, Zaidie Bonett; Treasurer, Mrs. Revenue. The officers annual reports were read and accepted. After the business meeting the club served ice cream and wafers. Mrs. Sadie Orr-Dunbar and Miss Cronin were among the guests. In the evening they spoke at Shelley's hall on the tuberculosis campaign and the American Red Cross work.

A Letter from Mr. Phelps.

To the Editor.—As I have promised to let my friends and neighbors know of my whereabouts occasionally and my military experience, I thought that maybe you would appreciate a letter to the paper and thus I could reach my friends and save my pen.

My ability is not very great in this line and if my conceit has tempted me to encroach too much upon your space you no doubt have a waste paper basket.

I left Portland Wednesday evening, June 13 and arrived here Friday morning at about 8 o'clock and had my first military breakfast. We were a party of eight, I being in charge till we landed here. That is as near as I have come to being an officer so far.

We were examined yesterday and sworn in today and will probably commence working out tomorrow. I went through everything tip top but I am expecting my conceit to get many a hard jolt when I see what we have to learn and the course of sports we are given.

When I see the hundreds of young men pouring in I wonder that some are not lost or that there is not more confusion, but they seem to know that you are on the job and will soon give you a call. I think the average man coming here has the most serious and patriotic intentions and they are for the most part a very fine bunch of men.

California around here will not compare with our Oregon country—everything is bare and dry. We are quartered in a new barracks that holds probably about 300 men and are fed in a large dining hall about two blocks from our quarters. The food provided is good and one only wonders how they manage to cook and place before the men sufficient to satisfy for they are meeting unusual conditions, such as the constant stream of new arrivals, who come in large and small groups and at all times of the day.

The kitchens and bakeries were originally intended for a very much smaller service but the people in charge are getting there.

June 20th. Lights were turned out before I could finish last night so I will be able to do a few more items.

Today we were taken out for drill for the first time and, if I performed as awkward as I felt, it must have been funny. The sergeant said we did very well for rookies—48 of us. This is six squads of 8 men each. This afternoon half of us went to the sick bay for vaccination and the end is not yet.

The trip down was quite interesting but some way I think we have all of the scenery discounted a mile for beauty and grandeur. Speaking of water I get homesick when I think of our good cold water. I am glad that this letter will not be read by these Californians or I might land in the bay.

I wish all of my friends and neighbors the very best of luck and would be very glad to hear from anyone.

Sincerely yours,

Wm. H. Phelps,
Company I, Marine Corps,
Marine Island Navy Yard,
Vallejo California.

Editor's note—Mr. Phelps' letter will be read with interest by his many friends at home. We look forward with pleasure for other communication to follow.

SUBMARINES IN WARFARE.

Only Men of Iron Nerves and Quick Decision Can Work Them.

"It calls for men of iron nerves and quick decision to man our submarines either in peace or war," writes Frank E. Evans in St. Nicholas. "Submarine experts look upon the factor of nerves as the most important of all, and they have given to it the title of calculation."

"Within the cramped walls that are the home of the crew are housed the most intricate mechanisms that man has invented for warfare. Outside its steel walls are mines, great nets of wire, explosives, shells and seaplanes, all devised for its destruction, and the sharp keels of ships that slice through them as a knife cuts cheese. The smallest shell can penetrate them and nets can hold the submarine as helplessly as a child in the grasp of a giant."

"Danger lies everywhere for the tiger of the seas. The ocean in which it lives is a powder tank that waits but for a spark. Only nerves of iron can cope against such an array of enemies. The slightest hesitation of its captain in the face of any of them means the end of his ship and his crew."

"As one expert has put it, the whole A B C of submarine warfare is to act at an instant's warning with nerves of steel."
