"For Sandy Always."

The Red Cross Society.

A brief reference was made in the last issue to the splendid response that was made here and elsewhere to the appeal for funds for the benefit of the Red Cross society of America. A more extended account of its growth, aim and purpose would be appropriate at this time.

The growth of the Red Cross Society is evidence not to be denied that the spirit of service is strong in the hearts of the people of today. The work of the society demonstrates that there are thousands who are willing to devote all their services to humanity and the support given them by voluntary contributions shows that they are hundreds of thousands more who are willing to devote a portion of their means to the alleviation of suffering.

The activities of the Red Cross have been generously supported by the American public, but since our own soldiers began to take a place in the trenches alongside our allies this support has become countless. It is the suffering and comfort of the men from our own country as well as the physical needs of our allies for which the Red Cross must now mobilize. The result—a greater and a more imperative duty now confront the givers in America.

No appeal to the generosity of the American public has ever been unanswered. Let one part of the word be visited by some calamity like the Mount Pelee and Italian earthquake, the China flood the Johnstown flood, the San Francisco earthquake or any greater or less calamity, and the response from the nation is immediate and generous to a degree. The services of the Red Cross Society to both sides during the Boer war and in other wars was liberal and sacrificing. Fresher in our minds is the work of the American unit in the war in Europe for the past three years especially in the relief given the Belgian people.

To meet this new and greatly enlarged demand—this demand that has the added force of patriotism and a duty we owe our own soldiers—there has been a campaign to raise $100,000,000 for the Red Cross work. The campaign has been conducted with a vigor and earnestness that assured success. It was participated in by all classes of Americans from the President of the nation down to the smallest boy and girl and the women of our nation were particularly active.

"Red Cross week will not be the only time one can assist the society. Every week should be a Red Cross week with those who are able to contribute to the aid of this greatest agency of mercy. Its work is pressing and will continue so for a long time. It needs continuous support and will not appeal in vain to a people as generous as the American nation.

Wasting or Saving?

Our entrance into the war has brought us to the point where it becomes a national duty for every citizen to save and eliminate every form of waste. Not only the fate of the civilized portion of the old world, but our own as well is almost wholly dependent upon the manner in which we produce and save.

You can husband your financial resources by saving your pennies and depositing them in the bank. It will prevent you wasting them on useless and trivial things when later there will be a demand for necessities.

Up to Uncle Sam.

World affairs has reached the point where it is up to Uncle Sam to win the world war.

In concise language of the Frenchman, "there is no more Russia," at least so far as counting for a vital, aggressive force in this conflict.

If we in this country have not yet fully conceived what this fact portends, it is well that we consider this fact very seriously. It means that whereas the central powers have heretofore maintained an enormous army of seasoned fighters on the eastern front, they are now withdrawing these veteran troops and hurrying them in masses upon the French and British lines.

It means that under present conditions it is a physical impossibility for the entire armies to gain even a nominal victory.

It means the best that we can expect until our arms are in the field is a standstill.

And it means that, unless this country musters its entire strength in both men and means, and uses that strength to the limit, the cause of human freedom will lose the fight and America will go down in the ruins. For with England and France defeated, or even nominally victors, and a still powerful Prussian autocracy spreading itself over the earth, the future of democracy will be dark indeed.

If every man and woman in America will get firmly in mind the fact that we must win this war if it is to be won and that if it is lost our own ideals and our institutions are in grave danger, then, and not until then, will we be in an attitude to face the task that is to be faced.

The God of Hosts can find no use for the man who having put his hand to the plough, turneth back.

Highly Esteemed.

"Half a loaf is better than no loaf," said the philosopher.
"There's no doubt about the respect to which half a loaf is entitled," replied the plain person. "It costs as much as a whole loaf used to."—Washington Star

The Kind Wren.

The house wren is charitable enough to take care of the young of other species. One has been known to feed and rear four young robins whose parents had met with disaster.

Musical Note.

"Didn't her constant singing in the hat annoy you?"
"Not so much as the constant flat in her singing."—Puck.

Quail of the Bible.

The quail mentioned in the Bible in Exodus xvi, Numbers xi and in Psalm cv, 40, is a bird of passage about the size of a turtle dove and resembling the American partridge.
