Let's Start a Classified Department

Let's start a classified ad department! We believe that a classified ad department is one of the most essential sections of a small town newspaper. In an effort to start a department with the Post we are offering three insertions of not more than 25 words to each subscriber of the Post.

Bring, write or phone your ads in. Surely you have something to sell that somebody else needs or wants. How about strawberries, wood, and old stove for pickers cabins, that discarded rocking chair, a hors, chickens, etc? The Sandy Post circulation list is climbing everyday. Sandy people are interested in Sandy news and the Post is the most complete news medium for Sandy now being distributed.

Let's start that classified department, NOW!
Three FREE ads to every subscriber!

Property Sold Through Ad

A letter received this week proves it pays to advertise in the Sandy Post. The letter follows:

Fern C. Lambert,
Publisher Sandy Post,
Sandy, Oregon.

Dear Madam:

The advertisement entitled "Wanted A Man" which we ran in your July 6th issue seems to have attained the desired purpose. It resulted, not in finding a man, but in finding a woman who purchased the property. Please discontinue the advertisement obliging.

Yours truly,
A. MEYERS

"The Cannibal Islands of Fiji"

By MASON WARNER

Suva, Vitilevu, Fiji Islands.—Captain Cook christened these "The Cannibal Islands of Fiji" because of the savagery of the natives and their practice of eating enemies who fell in battle. The Fijians are not of the pure Polynesian race and because of the mixture of Melanesian or negroid blood cannot be classed with the Hawaiians, Samoans, Tahitians, or the Maoris of New Zealand.

The Fijians succumb easily to the so-called "white man's diseases"—measles, scarlet fever, tuberculosis. In 1875, the king of the Fijis and his son visited Australia. The prince contracted the measles and returned to his island home before he recovered. A dreadful epidemic ensued, and 40,000 of the 160,000 inhabitants of the islands died from the scourge.

Fijian women dress in brilliant colors and adorn themselves with flowers. The white residents of the islands appear to like the natives, though the best friends of the Fijians admit they are indolent and unmoral. Their cheerfulness and honesty offset their shortcomings, it is said. The picture shows Fijian women in their picturesque native dress.

Duty is the Demand of the Hour

Because of our tendency to do more than duty demands to alleviate the distress of a sad occasion, many families are everlastingly grateful.

Inventors to Have Exhibit

Inventors up and down the coast and in Oregon particularly will have an opportunity to display their wares at a special Inventors' Show to be featured this year at the annual Oregon State Fair, according to an announcement made this week by Leo Spitzbart, fair manager.

Inventions ranging from household gadgets to the latest farm and logging equipment will be displayed. News reels will explain in detail the workings of these creations. The exhibition room, complete in every detail, will permit the public to see the inventions under actual working conditions.

J. T. Anderson, in charge of the Inventor's Show predicts a large attendance at the exhibits during the Oregon State Fair, September 5 to 11. He bases his prediction on the success of similar shows which he has managed.

Anyone having ideas or inventions is invited to contact J. T. Anderson, Chamber of Commerce, Salem.

HOW MANY QUARTS?

"How many quarts of berries can I can from a crate of berries; how many pints of solid meat can I get from a two-pound fowl; how many quarts can I can from a bushel of tomatoes?" These and similar questions are asked by housewives who are busy at this time of year filling their storage pantry shelves with surplus food supplies to be used during winter months.

A list giving approximate amounts of canned products which may be obtained from raw products has been compiled by the home economics division of the extension service of Oregon State Agricultural college at Corvallis. Here it is:

Apples—1 bushel or 48 pounds yields 20 quarts canned.
Berries—1 crate or 18 pounds yields 10 to 14 quarts.
Cherries—1 lug or 24 to 28 pounds yields 18 to 22 quarts.
Peaches—1 lug or 24 to 28 pounds

yields 8 to 12 quarts.
Pears—1 box of 40 to 45 pounds yields 20 to 24 quarts.
Prunes—1 bushel or 45 to 50 pounds yields 30 quarts.
Tomatoes—1 bushel or 45 to 50 pounds yields 14 to 18 quarts.
Asparagus—3 pounds yields 1 quart.
Beans, string—20 pounds yields 14 to 16 quarts.
Beets, baby—1 bushel or 60 pounds yields 17 to 20 quarts.
Carrots—1 bushel or 50 pounds yields 17 to 20 quarts.
Corn—2 dozen ears yields 2 to 3 quarts.
Peas, green—8 pounds yields 2 quarts.
Pumpkin—4 pounds yields 1 qt.
Spinach, Swiss chard or beet tops—2 pounds yields 1 quart canned.
Fowl—2 pounds yields 1 pint solid meat and 1 pint stock thick enough to jell.
