

Molalla People All Dressed Up For Buckeroo

MOLALLA — Molalla citizens are "dressed up" for the 17th annual Molalla Buckeroo scheduled for July 4, 5, 6 and 7. Boosters of the big roundup are wearing 10-gallon hats and brightly colored shirts for which this western city is well known.

Plans for the roundup are materializing rapidly and directors of the association have announced that all Boy Scouts bearing credentials will be admitted for 25 cents on Friday, July 5. Special features for the youngsters will be provided this day.

Nationally known cowboys are sending in their entry blanks, competition to be furnished by wild horses from eastern Oregon, ferocious Brahma steers, Texas longhorns and speedy calves. The "king" of the Brahmas is "Speedy," the big bull who has not been ridden for three years. The Molalla Buckeroo association has offered a $50 special prize to any cowboy who rides him during the show. "Sleepy" just can't be tamed. He was in all kinds of trouble last year and nearly wrecked the roundup fences and corrals.

Diamond Dewey, who makes his headquarters in Los Angeles, will entertain the young and old in the role of clown. He performs with his trained buffalo.

Anna Mae Dunrud, a real western out-of-doors girl who has been riding horses since she was 6 years of age, has been chosen queen of this year's Molalla Buckeroo. Ed May will be arena director.

The Buckeroo directors announce that there will be parades, carnival, dances and on the night of July 4 there will be free fireworks. The afternoon shows start at 2 o'clock.

Popularity Contest For County Fair

(Special to the Sandy Post)

The first shade of the annual Clackamas county fair comes in the form of an announcement that nominations are open for participation in the popularity contest to be held in conjunction with the fair. The Canby harvest festival will last from August 28 to 31.

Entry blanks are appearing in all country newspapers. Over $175 in cash prizes are being awarded this year, besides a free trip to the San Francisco World's fair to the girl winning the popularity contest. Each season admission button is accompanied with a ballot good for votes. The ballots may be cast for any of the girls in the contest, the winner not necessarily the person distributing the most buttons.

Entry blanks should be sent to J. Everett Gurley, 220 Eighth street, Oregon City. A representative group from each section in the county is expected to compete in this contest. The actual contest is slated to begin July 26 and to close August 24 in time to permit the selection of the court's wardrobe which is to be purchased by the county fair board.
