DRAFT — — — Commonsense

To me the most interesting thing about the drawing of numbers of young men to whom will be given military training is that the procedure completely failed to have the effect which many politicians feared and predicted it would have. Instead of an enormous public protest, the draft demonstrated the innate commonsense of the American people, who have accepted compulsory military training as if it were a long-established regular routine.

As nearly as I can figure out, all of the outcry against the draft originated with a very small group of pacifists, perhaps more or less consciously egged on by Communists. Politicians were scared, as politicians usually are, by something that was new in their experience. There is nothing which resembles a scared rabbit quite so much as the average politician in an election year.

I've talked with a lot of the boys whose numbers came up. Without exception, they're all tickled pink at the prospect. And the wives of the ones who are married seem to be just as happy.

WOMEN — — — — — courage

The ridiculous and sentimental notion that women are the less courageous sex, if not the weaker seems to have a strong hold on the political mind. Until now, the United States has not faced a possible war situation with the opinions of women voters to consider. There weren't any women voters the last time we went to war, but womanhood's sentiments were supposed to be expressed in the popular song: 'I didn't raise my boy to be a soldier.'

The politicians who opposed the draft for fear of the women's vote should be reassured by now. The mothers of the first boys drafted are proud to have their sons taken. One of them, Mrs. Henry S. Bell, was in the hall in Washington when the first number, 158, was drawn from the bowl, and it was her own son's number. She could hardly restrain her pride.

The proudest woman I know is a 'Gold Star Mother' whose three sons all died in France in 1918. Don't tell me that women are against war, if and when it seems the right and only course to take. I know better.

PIONEERS — — — — — grit

There stands in Washington a sculptured memorial to the pioneer women of America. One has only to look at it, and think of the courage and endurance which the women displayed who made this country what it is, to get over the idea that there's anything soft about American women. When it comes down to real grit, toughness of moral fiber and clear judgment between right and wrong I'll pick women rather than men any time.

I often think back to the tales I heard in my boyhood, of men and women of my own family who had gone pioneering into the wilderness of the American West. One of my great-great-grandmothers was sixteen when she and her young husband of eighteen started for the Vandalia Territory in a covered wagon. Her granddaughter, my grandmother, told me how her grandmother had to shoot five Indians before the redskins quit trying to burn the log cabin she and my great-great-grandfather had built with their own hands.

The women of today don't have to show their courage in the same way, but I'm satisfied they have just as much of it and are very far from being the parlor pets which sentimental songwriters depict them.

HOSTESSES — — — — — important

Add to the list of women's functions in military service, the newly created posts of hostesses and librarians in the Army training camps. There will be a senior hostess and two junior hostesses at every Army Service Club. Their job will be to supervise recreational features and social affairs, looking out for women and children visiting the camp, supervising service club cafeteria ias which are to be maintained for visitors, and in general to help make life happier for the boys in training.

There are going to be plenty of books and reading matter for the trainees' spare time, and recreation facilities of every kind. The life of a modern soldier is not removed from feminine influence.

Women's part in war has always been important. Florence Nightingale paved the way for women nurses in the Crimean war between Britain and Russia. The Red Cross came into existence in our own Civil War. And who does not remember the devoted women of the Salvation Army, the 'Y' and the rest of the relief organizations who risked their lives in France to bring succor and comfort to our soldiers?

REALISM — — — — — attack

While I'm all for the idea of giving every young man some intensive military training, I get more and more doubtful as to whether we're going to be compelled to go to war at any time in the near future, unless our politicians do something to provoke a fight. It will be a long time before any of the aggressor nations can get around to attacking the United States.

I haven't any doubt one or more of them will try it if we don't prepare our resistance. But I'm beginning to believe that if we go ahead with a big program of defense by land, sea and air, we'll have plenty of time to defy all comers before anybody is prepared to pick a fight with us.

It's easy to get all stirred up over the outlook for war. I've shared some of the apprehensions of attack from overseas myself. But when I try to take a realistic view of our position and that of the rest of the world, I confess that I can't see how the attacking forces are going to get to us before we can stop them, from any direction. We're likely to get into war only if we go overseas ourselves to fight.

"Milestone Car" Presented to Contest Winners

Presentation of Chevrolet's "Milestone Car"—the 1,000,000th 1940 model produced by the industry's leader—was made at the New York World's Fair last week to Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Weinert (shown here), of Iron Mountain, Mich., owners of the millionth Chevrolet six-cylinder model, built in 1929. The Weinerts were winners of a nation-wide contest conducted by Chevrolet to locate No. 1,000,000. As guests of Chevrolet, the Michigan couple drove to New York, arriving at the Fair with more than 110,000 miles on their '29 car, which Weinert had purchased as a used car, at a price of $25. M. E. Coyle (left), general manager of Chevrolet, presented the new 1940 Special De Luxe model to the Weinerts. Chevrolet's production of a million units this year maintains a seven-year record of a million a year average, with the 1,000,000th 1940 car following No. 900,000 by exactly one month. The well-traveled 1929 model has been returned to Detroit, where it will be placed on display.
