Operation of alleged gambling devices under our Oregon Law, which refers to games of chance as slot machines, pinball machines, and punch boards, have been temporarily halted in Clackamas County, through the cooperation of Sheriff Fred Reaksecker and the State Police. Because of this wholesale raid, some 110 slot machines and pinball machines and 42 punchboards were confiscated and more than 60 operators were cited into court.

The Sheriff and State Police have done their duty and now it is up to the District Attorney.

The merchants and owners of these games of chance are not entirely at fault, as our different law enforcement bodies have been aware that these games have been operating in the open over a long period of time.

If we, the citizens, help enact these laws, let us abide by them.

Washington—The isolationists in the Senate began their big drive for outright defeat or serious modification of the controversial lend-lease proposal with the offering of a resolution by Senators Wheeler and Nye calling on President Roosevelt to ascertain the war aims of all belligerents, their peace conditions, and any secret treaties of which the President may have knowledge, which call for disposition of territorial spoils.

A joint statement issued by these two leaders of the isolationists bloc said: "The threat of American involvement in a foreign war is imminent today—and before this nation plunges from the brink into the holocaust of war, the people of the United States are entitled to know the war aims and peace conditions of England, of Germany, of Greece, of China, of Japan and any other warring powers.

"Most historians and students agree that the Treaty of Versailles provoked the present war. Before the United States goes any further along the road to war we should have assurances from our potential allies that American boys will not be plowed under European soil every twenty-five years.

"The lesson of the last World War should not be forgotten. We learned at tremendous cost the utter and complete futility of that war. We made our sacrifices in blood, in tears and in dollars to make the world safe for democracy and to end all war less than twenty-five years ago."

Opportunity for Debate

This resolution is affording an opportunity for floor debate in the Senate in the hope that such airing of views may influence the Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs which opened hearings at the beginning of the week.

Virtually the same parade of witnesses which appeared before the House Committee has been called before the Senate group with out any testimony. Secretaries Hull, Morgenthau, Stimson and Knox were under much sharp examination due to the unusual proportion of isolationist members on the Senate Committee, but remained unshaken.

In the meantime, debate in the House has been going. The House Committee wound up its hearings in executive session and heard testimony of three military and naval chiefs. House debate is being watched sharply in the Senate, and especially the disposition made of Representative Hamilton Fish's seven proposed amendments which Mr. Fish said, have the following purposes:

"To prohibit the President from giving away any part of the Navy.

"To prohibit the use of American Navy vessels to Convey American or British into the war zone.

"To limit the value of war materials to be lent to Britain to $2,000,000,000.

"To require that Britain put up some kind of collateral for any war materials received.

"To strike out the provision of the bill permitting belligerent war-ships to base upon or enter

American ports for repairs or outfitting.

"To limit the life of the bill, preferably to one year.

"To define the section which repeals any provision of existing law when the President deems such provision stands in the way of national defense."

Closure Talk Ceases

The House will soon be through with the bill, but it is not expected to emerge from the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee for at least another two weeks and then will be subjected to unlimited debate on the Senate floor.

All talk of a cloture in the Senate, which would set a time-limit on debate, has ceased, and Washington is awaiting the most bitter and acrimonious debating since World War I.

Yet there has been no change here in official quarters in the belief that the bill will pass without too many curbs and that in its final shape, President Roosevelt will have just about what he wanted when he first sent the bill for consideration. It is to be noted that in the past, the administration has sent bills which called for far more than was actually wanted—just so that there would be room for compromise, and while the lend-lease bill would undoubtedly be welcomed in its entirety, compromises can readily be made.

Approves Four Bills

While the Senate awaited the report from the Foreign Affairs Committee and argued the Wheeler-Nye resolution, it took time out to approve four bills which authorize more than $1,350,000,000 for vessels of all types, their armament and personnel to man them. This is the largest ship construction program in the history of the country and, if it were not for the debate on the lend-lease bill, would be front page news.

At least 253,000 additional workers will be employed in Navy yards between now and June, 651 new mid-shipsmen will be admitted to the United States Naval Academy, 200 cargo ships and 400 small navy fighting ships will be on the construction line and 58 of the Navy's fighting ships will have additional armor plate added to them.

With the whole nation stirring to its greatest defense effort in its history, the attitude of labor is assuming increasing importance here. Encouragement was found in the statement of Joseph A. McDonagh, secretary-treasurer of the American Federation of Labor, who voiced his approval of a six-day week for labor.

Industrial leaders close to the defense commission were a little disturbed by the clause in the proposal which provided for overtime pay on the six days, but on the whole were much gratified by the whole attitude of the Federation which was expressed by Wm. Green, President, when he said: "We have enlisted for the duration of the emergency."
