Official Income Tax Information

The federal income tax is, as the name implies, a tax levied upon incomes, and it is payable in relation to the amount of income. Income, for federal income tax purposes, means in general any compensation for one's services, whether the compensation be in money, or in goods, or other services; it includes also the net value received for the product of one's labor, as farm produce in the case of a farmer; income from investments; profit from business operations; and other gains from sales and exchanges of goods and property. Certain limited categories of income are, however, tax exempt, and to the extent of such exemption are excluded in computing the tax.

Because of exemptions from the tax given to persons having less than certain stated amounts of income, as well as because of various deductions and credits allowable, only a small proportion of the number of persons receiving income have until recently been subject to the tax. Thus, of the estimated 55 million persons in this country who received income in one form or another during the calendar year 1941, only some 26 million persons were required to file federal income tax returns for that year, while of these same 26 million, more than 9 million were not taxable due to credits and deductions allowable.

As a result of the lowering of exemptions, many more persons are now subject to the federal income tax than before, and for the calendar year 1942 it is estimated that more than 35 million persons will file federal income tax returns. To the large number of persons now subject to the federal income tax, who have never reported income before for federal tax purposes, an understanding of the law and applicable regulations is of prime importance.

An income tax return is a declaration on the part of the taxpayer of his total taxable income for the year, together with the various deductions, exemptions, and credits to which he is entitled. It is in reliance upon voluntary disclosure, and the integrity of taxpayers generally, that the cost of administration of the income tax can be kept at a minimum. Though the return is a voluntary statement, any person who willfully makes a return which he does not believe to be true and correct in every material matter is subject to the penalties provided by law.

The first requirement of the law is the filing of an appropriate return. For individuals generally, this must be done by March 15 following the end of the calendar year. The return must be filed with the appropriate Collector of Internal Revenue for the district in which is located the legal residence or principal place of business of the person making the return.

Under the present law every single person, and every married person not living with husband or wife, having a total income (earnings, together with other income) of $500 or more, and married persons living with husband or wife throughout the taxable year, who have an aggregate income (total earnings of both husband and wife, together with other income) of $1200 or more, regardless of the amount of net income, must file a return.

"TRAILER VAGABOND"

By WARREN BAYLEY

DODGE CITY, KANSAS
BOOT HILL CEMETERY

Perhaps one of the cleverest publicity stunts that has been pulled off in many years occurred in this used to be wild and untamed city of the western frontier. That the stunt was pulled in a former graveyard only added to its appeal. The Rotarians of Dodge City created something new and different.

Back in the old days when Dodge City was having growing pains and the rattle of gun-fire was a daily occurrence, their famous Boot Hill cemetery came into being. Its origin was typical of early days — I quote from a sign on the property:

"During the Golden Gun Age of the West in 1872, Boot Hill, the Coffinless Grave Yard, was started when two gun toters driving a yolk of oxen, camped on this hill. They engaged in a gun fight and one was killed. The other drove away. As there was no undertaker in this young town, the unfortunate plainsman was allowed to lie where he fell, the greater part of the day. When two laborers returned home in the evening, their wives told them of the tragedy. In the shade of night with their shovels they dug a shallow grave by the side of the victim and he was buried without prayer, ceremony, song, or the removal of his boots. In a few weeks another knight of the border fell in a gun fight over the favor of some bewitching dance hall maiden and the two were planted in this embryonic graveyard, their boots removed and placed under their heads for a pillow. This historical tract was located and named by accident—only the notorious were buried here."

Such was the origin of Boot Hill and it remained a final resting place for the friendless and unknown until 1879 when the property was acquired by the city as a school site. At that time the bodies were removed to the city cemetery—a famous landmark of the old west had given way to modern life.

In the late 20's the Rotarians of Dodge City were planning a get-together with many out-of-town visitors. They wanted to do something in the way of entertainment and Boot Hill offered the solution. The schoolhouse of the 70's had been replaced by the City Hall and the old cemetery site was part of the grounds. They promptly fenced it in and recreated it in more than its former glory. For before where the graves were either unmarked or marked with a plain board, they were now fixed up in carnival style. Human heads and feet were made of concrete and placed at each grave in such a manner that it gave the impression that the deceased was buried in such a hurry that only the middle part of his body was covered. The old board head markers were set in their former positions and the Rotarians were ready for their visitors.

To say that the stunt was a success would be an understatement. But the fun didn't stop when the Rotarian get-together was over. Visitors not familiar with the stunt carried home some great stories of Dodge City and residents were obliging in telling tall tales to help accommodate the visitors. As a result, Boot Hill is now more famous than ever and thousands of visitors come annually to see it. To say the least it is something different.
