JOHN LEDYARD
PLANTER OF AN IDEA

One of the most valuable contributions to the advancement of mankind is an idea. It was John Ledyard who planted an idea in the fertile mind of Thomas Jefferson which resulted in the Lewis and Clark expedition and the ultimate acquisition of the Pacific coast by the United States of America. Ledyard was a rover by nature. He sailed with Captain James Cook as Corporal of the Marines on the ship "Resolution" in 1776, to the northwest coast of America. It was on that cruise that Ledyard sensed the great possibilities of that vast, unexplored region.

In 1782, Ledyard was back in America on board a British man-of-war, leaving the British service, he endeavored to interest American capital in a trading and exploring expedition to the north west coast. Failing in this, he sailed for France in 1784. There he met Thomas Jefferson and John Paul Jones to whom he sold the idea of the possibilities of the northwest coast of America. However, funds failed to materialize to outfit an expedition so Ledyard resolved to start by land thru France and Russia and across the Bering Strait to America.

While at Yakutsk waiting for the weather to abate, he was arrested as a spy and taken to Moscow. Acquitted of the spy charge, he hastened to London where he was offered the leadership of an expedition to explore Africa. Ledyard arrived in Cairo, Egypt on August 19, 1788. His last letter to Thomas Jefferson on November 15, was written with America ever in mind.

Just before the expedition was to start, Ledyard died at the early age of thirty-eight, with his hopes still unrealized.

Like most pioneers, Ledyard profited nothing by his bold ventures and his great privations, but he left the germ of an idea with Thomas Jefferson which bore abundant fruit in the years to come.

was served by the committee, Mrs. Orr, Mrs. Bruns and Mrs. Reiberg. The next meeting will be the third Wednesday in February, with Sadie Bosholm and Alice Scales as hostesses.
