THE LOW DOWN

from

HICKORY GROVE

My essay today is "Government"—how it gets its money, and who from. And if your town or county or state is building a paved highway, or water-works, or something, and the government kicks in with half the cost, everybody should savor as to how much of the gift is really free—if any.

And to make a long story short, the free government donation is your own money—the government took it from your own jeans in the first place via income taxes, cigarette taxes, talcum powder taxes, etc., etc. And if the government had made no donation to your community—or to any of the 1,000 other places throughout the nation—your taxes would have been just that much smaller. Uncle Samuel has no other income, he produces nothing, he grows no crops—he just spends. And it is our own dinero that he hands back to us via our congressman or mayor or whoever it is that we kept on re-electing because he got us a new bridge or something, from the government—free.

Now, and hereafter, when the mayor taps his chest and says, "Citizens, see what I got for you—a free donation from the government," you can lean over and say to the gent, "Come now brother, where do you get that 'free' palaver?"

Yours with the low down,
Jo Cerra
