GREENWOOD CARRIES THE BALL

State Representative Jack Greenwood, from up Wemme way, has been doing a great job of carrying the ball for Clackamas county in its emergency program to present to the voters at a special election the recently worked out proposals for financing a county road program.

The county court found itself stymied as to ways and means of financing the special election necessary to get prompt action on the matter. Failure to present the issue to voters at a special election at once would mean the special levy could not be included in the tax levy now being prepared for collection next fall. That failure would mean no funds could be procured with which to carry on the tremendous amount of road repair work which simply must be done this spring and summer.

Rep. Greenwood has kept in close touch with the situation and when it was found that the election could be financed only by having a special enabling act passed by the legislature, he worked closely with county officials to insure such an accomplishment. The act will provide for the county to use money from a number of funds not raised by taxes for financing the special election. The funds would be used on a "loan" basis and would be returned to the original accounts from funds provided for the road program as a favorable result of the special election. The bill was drawn by County Attorney Lindas after a conference with Attorney General George Neuner and his assistants, and Rep. Greenwood stood by Sunday night until it was completed and then took it to Salem with him. There he succeeded in getting permission to present it at once for legislative approval and it was scheduled for vote in the house Wednesday. As this was being written, the vote had not been taken but there was every reason to believe the bill would pass without difficulty.

In the meantime, other Clackamas representatives joined The Old Man of the Mountain in pushing for quick action on the bill. Arrangements had been completed for it to move through the senate at the same fast pace it was put through in the house. The fact that the matter pertained only to Clackamas county, of course, removed it from the controversial class so far as the whole legislature was concerned and thus helped Mr. Greenwood to expedite the matter. Nevertheless, much credit is deserved by our own local representative for sticking steadfastly to the job and doing everything in his power to guarantee the Clackamas county voters will have the opportunity to approve at a special election the road financing program they have played the major part in developing.

To many this may seem just a simple case of a good public servant seeing his duty and doing it. However, to those who are familiar with the difficulties that customarily attend any effort to speed a bill through the legislative hoppers—and who of us hasn't observed that in the last several weeks—Mr. Greenwood's success in this instance is a truly fine job of carrying the ball that ranks with the best performances of the greatest open field runners in the country.

MORE FUNDS FOR HIGHWAYS

The clamor for additional funds for maintenance, improvement and expansion of Oregon's state highway program has been answered by action of the legislature this week. The answer was given in approval of the financing program recommended by the interim committee on highways that the state gasoline tax be increased one-cent per gallon and that automobile registration fees be jumped from $5.00 to $10.00 per year.

The increased gas tax and registration fees will bring in additional revenues estimated at $8,000,000. Of this amount, $5,600,000 has been allocated to the use of the state highway department and $2,400,000 will be returned to cities and towns for use on their principal streets.

The increases were the subject of considerable controversy early in the present legislative session, but when the program was presented for final passage it was approved by a substantial margin in both the house and the senate.

Approval of the program now places the highway commission in a position to proceed with a 15-year program of highway development that will be a tremendous asset to the state. Actually, the need is pressing for every phase of that program right now. That it will require 15 years for accomplishment should serve as warning to all of us that long before it has been completed we will be hollering for still greater improvements and more additions to the state highway system's mileage. We must become inured to the fact that so long as our present rapid pace of population growth continues, we will be behind the eight-ball for meeting requirements for public highways—and for that matter for public improvements of all types.

CHECK THIS AGAINST THE "MANDATE"

The victory of republican candidates in the Michigan election early this week suggests that here is something to be checked against the so-called "mandate" which President Truman and his long-haired advisers declare they received from the people last November. It is a particularly potent check against the claim that the November democratic victory was a "mandate" dictated by labor and calling primarily for repeal of the Taft-Hartley law.

Michigan is one of the greatest labor states in the union. The vast automobile industry centered in and around Detroit carries probably the largest concentrated payrolls in the country. Hence, the republican sweep in Michigan this week may rightfully be construed as a direct and vociferous denial of the claim of a "labor mandate" which Truman has shouted from the housetops to the accompaniment of a rousing chorus by Phil Murray, Dan Tobin, Dave Beck, Harry Bridges and others of labor's silk stocking brigade.

From the comment one hears on the streets every day from men and women in all walks of life and all stratas of our economy, the Michigan results may well be more than a denial of the Truman "mandate" claims. They may also be a harbinger of the determination of thinking citizens to return their country's government to one of sanity and soundness, to cast out the demagogues and their false promises, and to translate that determination into action with sweeping results in the elections of 1950 and 1952.

NEW FISHING LICENSE FEES

The Oregon legislature this week completed action on its consideration of increasing fishing and hunting license fees. The result is a compromise from the doubling of fees originally suggested. The new program is designed to raise about 30 per cent more revenue with which to improve and expand our fish and game management and protection program. The cost to individual resident sportsmen was increased in about the same percentage.

Resident fishing licenses and resident hunting licenses each were upped from $3.00 to $4.00. Combination licenses were increased from $5.00 to $7.00. Non-resident license fees were increased in about the same amount.

Those are not heavy increases and they will be accepted without much objection by the vast majority of hunters and fishermen, but at the same time the outdoor fans will be keeping a watchful eye upon activities of the fish and game commission to be sure they are receiving full value for the additional license fees they are paying. They will recognize, of course, that an important part of this increase must of necessity go to meet higher costs of the activities already undertaken. They will not expect miracles, but they will expect advances that augur well for continued future improvement of the state's fish and game management, development and conservation program.

EMPLOYMENT PICKING UP

All of us locally have noticed a considerable improvement in employment with the advent of spring. Most of us are confident this trend will continue and that practically full employment of all those able and willing to work will be accomplished by summer.

Local observations are born out in reports reaching The Post from many sources. On both state and national levels, the number of unemployed has been declining slowly but steadily since the peak was reached in February. Here in Oregon, much of the winter's unemployment was of seasonal nature and hence did not come as a surprise, although the number of unemployed and the length of their unemployment was greater and longer than usual due to upsetting of the logging and lumber industry as a result of the maritime strike.

The important thing now, however, is that every state employment office in Oregon is currently reporting an increase in employment and employment opportunities. We visited last week end with a representative from one such office. He unhesitatingly predicted that before the summer was over there would not be enough help available to meet demands.

That is no guarantee for the long term future, but it certainly is a welcome sign of encouragement for the period immediately ahead.

Where can more vivid beauty be found than this area's hundreds of acres of golden daffodils highlighted by the brilliant backdrop of snow covered Mt. Hood sparkling in the spring sunshine?

The sob sisters have finally put over a "fair employment practices" law in Oregon which requires employers to hire any qualified applicant regardless of race, creed, etc. Now it's about time for employers to start demanding that any qualified person they put the finger on must accept employment by them. One makes about as much sense as the other.

RIGHT or WRONG

By Dick Horton

Well, what do you know. Gresham's city council has been bitten by the parking meter bug. Maybe they need the steel money-taking gizmos. But I'm glad we aren't blessed with them in Sandy. Cheers for the voters.

It would seem wise to me if the city set up some sort of a planning council and take steps to make sure that Sandy is never without parking facilities. A few well-located parking lots would cure any trouble that Sandy might have in years to come. Alleys wouldn't be a bad idea either. Trucks could load and unload without blocking all traffic.

Lot's of things going on around The Mountain these days. If the city jokers think us folk lead a dull life, I'd like to have them here a week or two. A gander at next week's calendar is enough to make one weak before starting. . . . as one of Portland's dailies says, "busy boys are better boys." . . . just how good can you get?

Sandy Sportsmen are tossing another dance. It's to be held Saturday night at the I.O.O.F. Hall. Featured is George Beers and his All String Orchestra. The Sportsmen have gone social—it's their second in as many months.

Tickets for the "Tourist Promotion" meeting, being sponsored by the Sandy Chamber of Commerce, have lots of takers down Gresham way. If The Mountain and Sandy people respond the same way, there'll be a hot time at the Fireside Monday night.

Got word that the Smorgasbord last Friday at Chapel of the Hills brought in over $250. People from all over the country journeyed out to the Chapel. Congrats to all of those who worked hard for its success.

Sandy Memorial Hospital volunteer community work crews start Monday. It's going to be a big job. But with everyone pitching in, the hospital will be up in no time. Each person who takes part in its construction will have something to be proud of when the hospital is completed.

Gotta problem. Here we have some of the most beautiful country in the world. But Sandy has grown so fast in the last few years that its beauty has been neglected. The problem . . . what could be done to give Sandy a face lifting?

Beautiful business buildings and homes are being built, but what about a few trees . . . a few flowers?

Howdy Folks:

Someone suggested that it would be a good idea for the fire department to keep a dog as a paid member to ride the truck at night and help locate the fire hydrants.

We won't necessarily go on record for that idea, but we can say positively that this town has some good firemen. They should be, because they never take their eye off the hose.

We have some good policemen, too. One of them had a bad accident, though. While reading a detective story, he fainted when a tire blew out in front of the police station.

You know, it has always puzzled us why it is so much easier for a sucker to find a swindler than it is for a policeman.

We know a gal so dumb she thinks a lawsuit is a garment worn by a policeman.
