Future Farmers Hold Green Hand Initiation

Monday, November 17 the annual Green Hand initiation of the Sandy Future Farmers of America for all incoming members was held in the wrestling room of Sandy High school.

The meeting was opened by the President, Byron Edmonds. After the reports and other immediate business was finished the meeting was turned over to the officers of the Gresham FFA who conducted the formal initiation. After the formal initiation the Sandy FFA took over the informal initiation. This consisted of various penalties for not knowing the FFA creed. The boys who knew the creed were exempt from the informal initiation.

The boys were given their FFA pins, and their hands dipped in Green food coloring which they had to wear all that evening and the school day of Tuesday, November 18.

The parents of FFA boys were invited and the movie "The Green Hand" was shown.

Refreshments consisting of cookies, ice cream, and coffee were served in the Home Ec room.

Scene of the story, "Dracula," is laid in Rumania.

"Reading together is fun, many Sandy families have discovered, and today's multitude of books often lead to or encourage the development of further interests such as hobbies, group activities and other pastimes," says Miss Goldie Carroll, seventh grade teacher at Sandy grade school and school librarian.

According to Miss Carroll the Sandy grade school library is tops as far as school libraries go. The renovation of old books and the purchasing of new books began two years ago. "If the exact book wanted cannot be found at the local school library, it can be obtained at Clackamas county library at Oregon City or at the state library at Salem," she adds.

The school library contains books on animal life, model railroad, cooking, sewing, puppet making, adventure stories, bibliographies and other outstanding books in the field of child interests, and many times the parents are just as interested in the books as the children are, Miss Carroll says.

Parents and friends of the school who visited Openhouse during Book Week on Tuesday evening, November 18, were impressed with the display of books, magazines, posters, and other evidence of Book Week.
