Gateway Toastmistress Club Plan April "Charter Party"

The major coming event for the Gateway Toastmistress club will be a "Charter Party" tentatively set for late April.

After many delays, the by-laws of the organization were approved by the International Toastmistress club and the local group will receive a charter soon, president Harriet Meinig stated.

Memberships paid up to and including the "Charter Party" date will be considered charter members, Mrs. Meinig said.

The Gateway Toastmistress club is a branch of the Gresham Toastmistress club. When the Gresham group became too large, eight Sandy members, who had driven to Gresham for the semi-monthly meeting, organized the Gateway club comprising members from the Sandy-Estacada and Mountain area. Membership to one club is limited to 30 members.

Program Beneficial

There are 23 paid-up memberships in the local club. Seven more women who want to improve their speech technique are being sought by the group. "This training is especially beneficial to incoming club presidents and other officers," Mrs. Meinig said, "but is helpful to anyone."

Present Officers

Officers are Harriet Meinig, president; Edna Waldron, vice-president, and membership chairman; Lorraine Barnett, secretary; and Theda Tucker, treasurer. Leonie N. Brooke, well-known teacher and writer, was chosen evaluator for three meetings. Agnes Hartwig is club representative.
