

Radio-TV Review

By Terry Revenaugh

Patti Andrews made her debut as a solo act on the Frankie Laine show Wednesday night.

WOW!

Patti's been grooming for a solo for over a year or more. In the last season with the Andrews sisters together, Patti had bigger and bigger solo stretches. She really brought the roof down on audiences with "Some of These Days." With more and longer singles, it became obvious that the sisters were pushing Patti for a singles act, when the old team broke up.

We don't have any accurate information on just how long the Andrews sisters have been together. Personally we can remember back in the fourth grade (now that's over 15 years ago) when the Andrews sisters were roaring out "Ble Meer Bist Du Shane." That's a long time to keep on top.

It also puts Patti Andrews in the "about 35" age group. The bouncing blonde atom capering around the Frankie Laine stage Wednesday looked like Betty Hutton in her active days and sounded much better. Patti, whatever her years, has a long-legged limber dance technique and she can really move fast.

One danger confronting Patti Andrews in her new solo song and dance act is the curse of similarity. Television has a number one lady clown who can belt out a rock and roll number, hoarsely shout the blues and cavort through the wildest slapstick dance numbers. Her name is Martha Raye.

Close your eyes and listen to Patti and you have a mental image of Martha—their voices have an uncanny likeness. Imagine Martha as a blond and you have a picture of Patti in the long-shot dance numbers.

We wish Patti Andrews a lot of luck and hope to see a lot of her during the coming TV season. Hope the luck of the Andrews sisters follows her so she'll find an intelligent producer who won't make her a blonde Martha.

Very Wild Goose
Speaking of the Frankie Laine Show—there's something we'd been missing and hadn't even known it. We knew of course that Frankie was taking over the 8:30 to 9 PM spot Wednesday nights left vacant by vacationing Arthur Godfrey. It didn't sound too exciting.

What with his records of "All of Me," and "Mule Train!" we'd pegged Frankie Laine as a more robust Johnnie Ray. A few film (Continued on page 11)
