BUDGET PLANNING

OREGON CITY (Special)—Planning sessions on the 1959-60 fiscal year budget for Clackamas county were scheduled to get underway Tuesday, May 19 with only four of the six member panel attending.

Judge Ed Latourette and Commissioner Stan Ely will represent the county court with Commissioner Darrell Jones absent and in Washington, D. C. attending a Congressional meeting on O and C timber management and other subjects related to natural resources.

Lee Stidd J. Oswego mayor and Anne Chambers, Oregon City labor union official, who are both member of the budget committee will be on hand for the Tuesday meeting with Earl Oliver, Canby businessman and third member of the committee, unable to attend the first session because of a previous commitment.

The 1959-60 budget sessions were later getting started than originally planned due to a delay in receiving official budget forms—required by Oregon law—from the state printers office.

The forms were received Friday and the first budget session was scheduled for Tuesday because two of the lay members of the group could not attend a Monday meeting, Judge Latourette said.

Auditor Irving Curran and a representative of his staff will also be on hand for all of the budget meetings.

"The schedule for the week doesn't appear to be too good since many other engagements were already scheduled by the committee members and Commissioner Jones is absent. Because of the delay in getting underway however we decided to schedule a session in spite of two members being forced absent," Latourette said.

The primary purpose of the first meeting will be to review requests and get the affairs lined up for more rapid handling once everyone is present.

The budget committee will be faced with providing funds for the completion of the jail, requests for additional funds from the health department to enlarge the Child Guidance Clinic staff and quarters and provisions for more help and space in other departments.

"The rapid growth of the county makes the need for more help and space ever increasing and we are trying to provide these aids to service without asking for additional funds from the taxpayers," the court said.

CARVER PARK

OREGON CITY (Special)—Efforts to obtain a nine-acre tract which features a quarter of a mile of Clackamas river frontage for an additional county park were underway this week by the county court.

The tract — which is now owned by the Highway Department — is located about about four miles east of Carver on the Carver-Barton highway.

"The highway department purchased the nine-acre tract about three-years ago when a huge earth and rock slide covered the highway near the tract location and the land was needed to allow the highway workers a place to dump the debris.

"Apparently the area was previously used as a roadside park since some old stone, outdoor fireplaces are still located in the area," Commissioner Stan Ely said.

The county court wrote to the state highway officials early during the month and received a reply from them Thursday indicating the matter was being investigated.

The court's letter was turned over to W.C. Williams, state highway engineer and C. H. Armstrong, state park superintendent, for study and a decision, the court said.

The proposed park area is known as the Crowley-Grantland property and because of the river frontage it will make an ideal roadside park, Ely said.

BUILDING PERMITS UP

OREGON CITY (Special)—Building permits for Clackamas county during April were nearly double those issued for the same month during 1958 in both number and cost of construction.

A total of 83 building permits were issued during April compared to 47 for the same month in 1958 and these 83 permits involved construction costs of $877,635. The 47 permits issued in April 1958 involved only $460,695 in construction costs. Don Morton, acting county planning director said.

The April 1959 permits included 57 for the construction of one-family dwellings. These totalled $812,635 in construction costs.

Only one permit for a two-family dwelling was issued during April 1959. This permit involved $20,000 in construction costs, Morton said.

Structural alterations for the building of homes and apartments included 17 permits during April at a total construction figure of $27,500.

Alterations to other buildings other than apartments or homes saw three permits issued with a cost figure of $5,400.

Construction of garages and non-residential buildings during the past month included costs of $12 with four permits issued by the county planning commission.

Also included in the non-residential buildings was another permit at $300 construction cost.

The issuance of building permits and the costs of construction has increased each month over those of 1958, Morton said.

SLOW DOWN CAMPAIGN

SALEM—Governor Mark O. Hatfield has pledged Oregon's support for the nation-wide Slow Down and Live traffic safety program this summer.

The governor signed a joint declaration with governors of all other states, territories and premiers of Canadian provinces to achieve a "higher degree of safety on streets and highways."

The campaign begins Memorial day and extends through Labor Day.

Governor Hatfield said support of the campaign is of vital importance to Oregonians this Centennial summer. The declaration states, "The safety and welfare of the people is our common concern. On our streets and highways, safety is essential to our resident and to those who visit us for business or recreation. Traffic accidents exact a terrible toll of life, limb and property. Every effort must be made to bring down and hold down our traffic casualty experience."

"To that end, in cooperation with the Association of State and Provincial Safety Coordinators, we urge every agency of traffic law enforcement and civic-minded individuals and groups, everywhere, to join with us in a concentration on safer highway during the summer of 1959. The 'in a hurry' psychology of vacation driving must be replaced by adherence to the watchwords, "SLOW DOWN AND LIVE."
