

Sandy High Wins First Game

Sandy Romps To Easy Win, 72 to 56

The Sandy Pioneers rolled to an easy 72-56 win over Hermiston in the opening round Wednesday of the state basketball tourney at Eugene. A crowd of nearly 7000 was on hand.

The Pioneers next take on Grants Pass in a game set for 7:30 P.M. Thursday also at Eugene.

Sandy was never in trouble in the Wednesday game—leading in every quarter. Dale Carpenter, with 20 points, was leading scorer for the Pioneers, champions of the Wilco league.

While Sandy pulled to a 40-point win over the Bulldogs from Hermiston, Grants Pass was dumping a highly-rated South Salem team 76-47.

High scorer in the game was Willard Stratton, a 6-1 forward for the Bulldogs who pushed through 21 points.

Hermiston was troubled all through the game by a lack of height. Sandy controlled both boards in the contest. Tallest Bulldog was 6-2.

Here is the Sandy scoring, in addition to Carpenter:

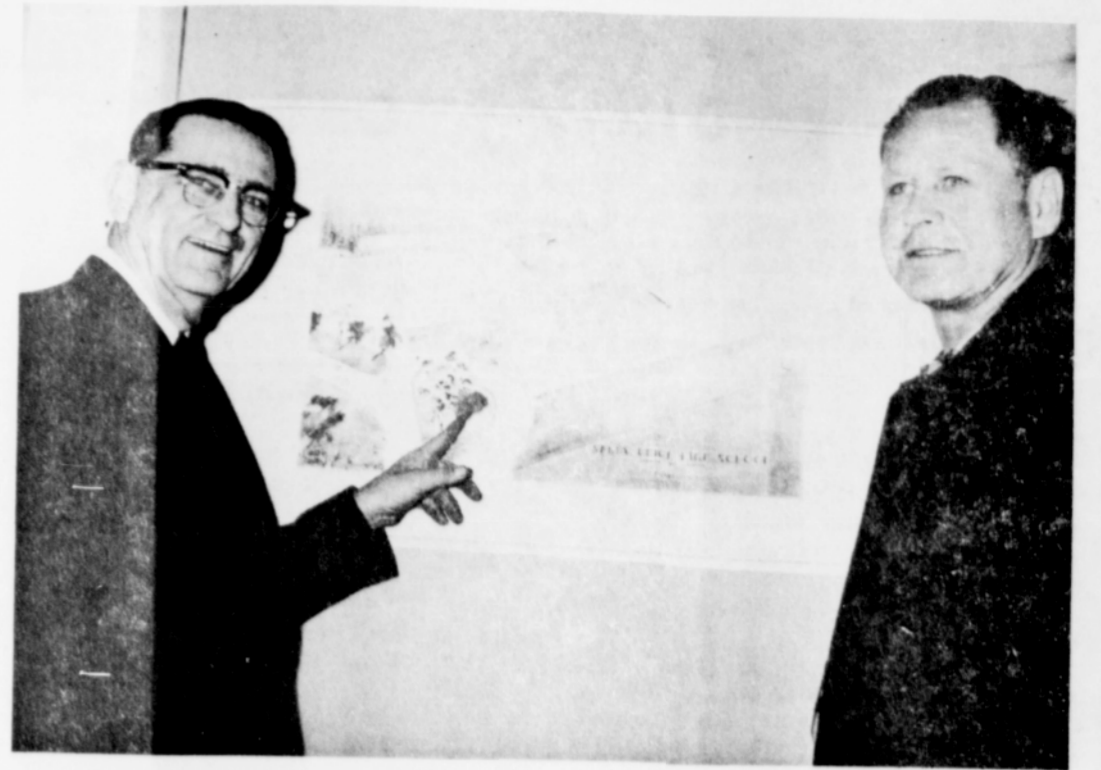

Dan Nichols.....	18
Chuck Croston.....	12
Carl Standstrom.....	11

New SUHS 'Unveiling' Set by Moms and Dads

Palmer Hewlett, architect, will bring his proposed plans for Sandy high school for an official "unveiling" at the Moms and Dads Club meeting Monday evening in the high school cafeteria.

Al Gantenbein, club president, says he expects a large attendance at this meeting, set for 8 p.m., as these long-awaited plans represent the culmination of many months of planning by school board, educational consultant and the architectural firm of Hewlett and Jamison.

Dr. Errett Hummel, educational consultant from Portland State college, who has been working with the school board for the last 18 months, will give a summary of his educational specifications which formed the basis for the proposed plans.

Charles Croston, superintendent of Sandy high school and liaison officer between the high school, the Moms and Dads Club and the community, will present three charts to show information statistics related to the growth of Sandy high.

The school board, whose members have spent many long hours working over these plans, will be present to help answer questions relating to the proposed expansion.

The Parent Teacher groups of Cottrell, Dover and Boring schools will be introduced at this meeting and the Boring PTA will give a program.

Charles Frasier Jr., woodshop instructor at Sandy high, will have a few of his boys at the meeting to display their partially finished projects that consist of furniture, record cabinets, gun cabinets, etc.

Mrs. Al Morner and Mrs. John Stroppe will serve refreshments to those attending the meeting.

Gantenbein emphasizes that not only parents of high school students, but all property owners and taxpayers of the district are invited to attend this meeting.

These BPW ladies were enjoying selecting suits and frocks at Scales Store from the many spanking-new spring arrivals. The show whose theme this year is "Garden of Roses," is scheduled for Wednesday evening, March 27. On the left Mrs. Warren

Sandy May Lose Retirement Homes

Mt. Resurrection Retirement Village is still a tenuous wraith, committed neither to wood and earth nor to pen and paper.

"Both Milwaukie and Hillsboro are also prospective sites for the retirement home project we plan," Rev. Bozarth told the Sandy Post. "While it is true that we had first considered the Sandy location for our retirement homes, I am at the moment postponing any decision until I see some tangible evidence of real support in Sandy."

Rev. Bozarth said the Sandy site offers scenic beauty, a salubrious climate and convenient closeness to the Gresham St. Jude's. His hesitation in going ahead with the Sandy enterprise is due to the loss of building time on the nursing home and the resultant loss of money, caused by the slowness of the sewer project.

St. Jude's of Sandy has had a precarious time financially, with Rev. Bozarth attributes in large part to delay caused by the wait for sewer completion. He feels, too, that Sandy's civic groups have shown an apathy inconducive to success of future projects. The Sandy Memorial Hospital Assn. holds funds donated by local people for the hospital his group has completed and runs not exactly as the original hospital was planned, but as a similar type of thing.

Rev. Bozarth states emphatically that if this money, which is being held for no apparent purpose, were to be given to St. Jude's of Sandy it would make a wonderful difference in the success of the project.

With such backing for the nursing home, Rev. Bozarth states, his group would not hesitate to plunge into the retirement project.

He points out that St. Jude's, which now has 31 patients, employs only local help. "Our payroll this month in Sandy is in excess of $3200," he says. "Next month it will be $4000. This all goes to Sandy people, and we buy all supplies we can in Sandy."

Rev. Bozarth says that a final decision on whether to locate the retirement homes in Sandy or elsewhere must be made within the next 120 days.

Grand Jury Exonerates Sandy Men

A "not true bill" was returned by the grand jury on the embezzlement charge against Robert J. Bunch and Donald L. Jackson, according to Clackamas county district attorney's office.

The pair was exonerated of the embezzlement charge placed against them by Jack Earl Stambaugh, who made a citizen's arrest on Feb. 4 when he discovered discrepancies in the January receipts at the Enco Sandy Save Center.

Five Injured In Kelso Crash

Five Portland people were injured in a semi-head-on collision one-half mile west of Kelso on Highway 26, Tuesday afternoon.

Latest report was that Mrs. Tracy Devore, driver of a 1962 Rambler, was in critical condition. Sgt. Tom Cutsforth of the Clackamas County sheriff's office, said the car driven by Mrs. Devore was apparently headed west.

Passengers in the Devore car were Curtis Summers, 9, and Dean Summers, 8, who suffered lacerations and minor shock. Another passenger, Nicholas Jones 20, was said to have a fractured ankle. Driver of the other car, which was headed east, was Donald S. Parker. He was reported to be in serious condition.

BPW Shows Fashion's 'Garden of Roses' Here

Fashion "firsts" for spring-time in Sandy will blossom at the "Garden of Roses" style show the Sandy Business and Professional Women's Club is staging next Wednesday evening at the high school. With a deadline hour of 8 p.m., March 27, the club's models and committee women are putting in many a long hour selecting fashion's newest and smartest for each member of the family.

It is Mrs. Warren Crutcher's executive ability that steers the overall fashion production. She promises cool-as-a-cloud pastels as well as the vibrant, singing, rose-garden shades.

Mrs. W. E. Hoffman will officiate as narrator, with Harry Cole acting as escort to the models as they make their grand entrance. Mrs. Carl Loundree will play throughout the production.

Merchants of the area have gone all out in support of the fashion event and the newest spring pretties from the Sandy Dress Shop, Scales Store and Wheeler's Weavery will be featured.

Ollie Kanak, secretary of the club, says, "Everyone is invited to see the lovely fashions we are presenting in the Sandy high cafeteria Wednesday evening. We promise an evening of gaiety, entertainment, door prizes and refreshments."

Conservationists To See Plaque Presented at Meet

Mas Fujimoto, chosen "Conservation Farmer" of the North Clackamas Soil Conservation District, will be honored at a meeting Monday evening at Ann's Coffee Shop in Sandy.

Fujimoto, whose principal crops are broccoli and strawberries, was recognized by the Conservation District of the numerous soil conservation measures he employs in farming his 85-acre home farm, plus an additional 40 acres that he rents.

Among the conservation measures that brought recognition to Fujimoto are the several thousand feet of drainage tile he put in. This has improved some 15 acres of land. Another conservation method he employs is a winter cover crop of vetch and rye to prevent erosion and add humus to the soil. He plants this cover crop in between the rows on the last planting of broccoli.

Fujimoto also uses dolomitic lime to insure the crops' use of minerals contained in the soil.

The Fujimoto farm is one mile west of Boring on Highway 212. In addition to Mr.

and Mrs. Fujimoto there are four youngsters, from grade school age to college level.

Besides his membership in the Gresham Berry Growers, Fujimoto is active in his community as a director of the Damascus grade school, a director of the Damascus Water District and a member of the Japanese American Citizens' League.

Fujimoto will be honored at the annual meeting of the North Clackamas Soil Conservation District, which is slated for Thursday, March 28, 10:30 a.m., at Ann's Coffee Shop in Sandy. At this meeting he will be presented a plaque by a representative of the Goodyear company, sponsor of the "Conservation Farmer" selection.

The annual meeting, for which the banquet room at the popular restaurant has been reserved, will see the election of two supervisors. Two short films will then be shown, "How Water Moves Through the Soil," and "Land of Many Faces."

A no-host luncheon will follow the meeting, to which wives of members, friends and interested persons have been invited.

City Sets Survey Of Water System

The Sandy city council met Monday night in a special session to discuss the water situation.

According to John Mills the council plans to get a comprehensive survey under way as soon as possible. Plans call for hiring an engineering firm to make the survey, which is to cover the undeveloped springs on the Orr property and a means of distributing this water, as well as a survey of the present head works, water mains, and volume of water available.

A plan is needed for distributing water throughout the city from the storage tank on the hill east of the city limits, Mills said.

Brought out in the discussion was the fact that while there are two mains—one eight-inch and one four-inch—along the highway from the present water source, there is only one five-inch pipe from the springs to these mains.

Consensus at the meeting was that if the city put the Orr property water in the old four-inch main it would help the present situation.

If water were metered and the city made use of the Orr springs it was felt there would be plenty of water.

Among points touched on in the discussion was the fact that never in the last three years has the water been lower than three feet; it overflows at night even in summer.

After the proposed survey has been completed the city will compile an outline of exactly what should be done.

Sandy Hospital Group Awaits Audit of Books

Mrs. Agnes Hartwig, president of Sandy Memorial Hospital Association, scuttled rumors that money collected from Sandy people for the hospital was to be turned over to a crippled children's hospital in another city.

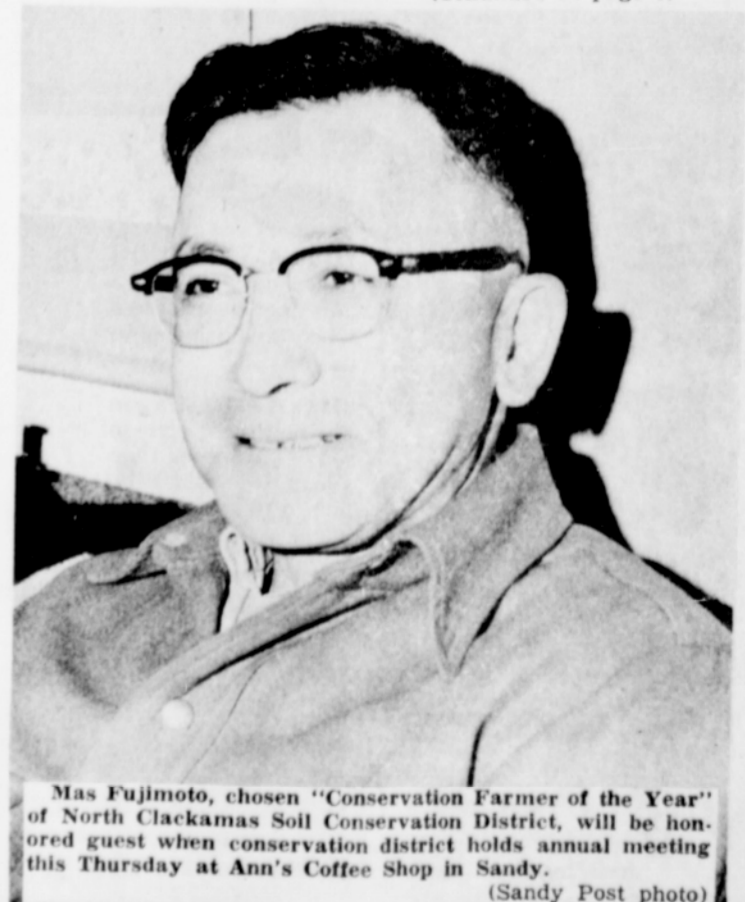

"This rumor is not true," Mrs. Hartwig said. "The ladies of the Hospital Auxiliary are donating money to such a hospital, but none of the Sandy Memorial Hospital association money is being used in this way."

Mrs. Hartwig said the association's books are being audited, and explained the length of time this audit has taken as being due to the auditors' becoming involved in income tax work at this season.

Ivan Barker said he, too, felt the delay in auditing the association's books was due to the
