Up and Down the Mountain

By JOE KIEFER

Spirit lake at the base of the mountain, Loowit, — "Mt. St. Helens" is a sparkling sapphire jewel with crystal clear water, ringed by towering forests.

The Indians' superstitions caused them to fear many places and Spirit lake was such a place.

They believed that demons called Seatco lived in and around the lake.

The Seatco were the spirits of departed Indian chiefs, displeased because the Indians had let the white men take over the country. As punishment the Seatco would not allow the Indians to hunt fish, or gather berries around Spirit lake or Mt. St. Helens.

The old Indian legends tell of warriors and maidens being seized and taken to the bottom of the lake.

Because of the Indians' fear of the lake, Paul Kane, a Canadian artist wandering through the northwest in 1847, could not hire anyone to accompany him to the lake or the mountain.

Spirit lake area is a strange beautiful place. The area indeed has strange phenomena. At certain spots can be heard the sound of waterfalls, where there are no waterfalls.

Floating Rocks
The rocks that float are pumice spewed out of Mt. St. Helens in long-age eruptions. There are strange noises when the winds blow across the lake from a certain direction.

Stranger yet is the famous dance of the spirits which occurs on the lake in the fall as wisps of fog about the size of a person rise from the lake's surface and take on the form of whirling demons.

There is an Indian legend of a hunter, seeking food for his starving tribe, who once followed a giant elk to the edge of the lake.

The elk plunged into the water, and the hunter followed him.

At once the demons stretched out their long arms and drew him to the bottom of the lake.

The elk was only a ghost which the demons had sent out to lure the man to death. On a certain night each year, the elk and the Indian appear in the mists over the lake.

In the snow on the mountain-top above the lake, other Indians used to say, a race of man-stealing giants lived. Perhaps the myth of the Hairy Ape could be a true tale. The Spirit lake area is certainly an appropriate spot for a band of lost Indians or some other out-of-this-world creature to take up refuge.

Snowman Seen Here
Reading the Oregon Journal it tells us we have an abominable snowman in our mountains. It's supposed to be half man and half animal, about 7 feet tall and weighing around 400 pounds. It was seen at Alder creek, Estacada, and then on Wildcat mountain.

It seems to me some one must have been drinking kick-a-poo juice that had a wallop. But if there is such a critter I wonder what would happen if it strolled into the Brightwood tavern and ordered a beer. I'll bet the stools would empty fast.

Associate Justice William O. Douglas, 64, did it again — this time a new bride age 23. On brother! He must, on one of his hikes, have been hit on his noggin' by an agropelter. If you don't know what an agropelter is, ask any logger. He will tell you.

Chuckie Department
How about a few chuckles. Maybe this country would not be in such a mess today, if the Indians had adopted more stringent immigration laws.

At the Mt. Hood Golf club, said the golfer as he added his score, "I'm not playing my usual game today." Said the caddy, "What game is that, sir?"

I wonder if Dr. Bill Gulick knows why there are so few dentists in Russia.

Why Bill, the citizens are afraid to open their mouths. Dave Owens manages such an exclusive and dignified meat department at our Mt. Hood store he calls chuck roast "Charles Roast."

I'm saying hello to a fine mountain man, a young fellow age 83, whom we all know as Huckelberry Finn.

What a beautiful climb it is to the summit of your White Lady! Skookum Bartley, Lory Bartley, Mike Gudge, Ralph Calkins, and Marylee Calkins picked a perfect day.

John West took the gang to Crater Rock on his snow cat. From there it was shanks' mare to the summit and return. These mountaineers with hairy ears take their hats off to pretty Miss Marylee Calkins, age 12, on her first climb. Like the past month of July which was the month of the tall tomato vines, but no tomatoes, and the electric blankets. So long till next time.

NURSE GRADUATES

Marna Dorman York will graduate from the Good Samaritan Hospital School of Nursing on Sept. 13, at 8 p.m. at Trinity Episcopal church, Portland. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy A. Dorman, Rt. 2, Box 63, Sandy.

Safety Stressed For School Kids

With the ring of the school bell drawing closer there comes the reminder that school days bring traffic hazards for youngsters. The National Safety Council reports that accidents cause more deaths among children 1 to 14 than the five other leading causes of death combined and recommends this three-point program for drivers to heed:

Be ready for the unexpected whenever you see a group of children in a school yard or near a street. Baseballs, basketballs and footballs take strange bounces and make children forget about oncoming traffic.

Give yourself an even greater margin for safety in rainy or winter weather, when streets are slick and it becomes much harder to stop quickly.

Whether schools are in session or not, keep your car in top mechanical condition. Be sure it will respond to your command.

In addition to its campaign for the prevention of deaths in traffic accidents, the council has urged better fire protection in schools, more school bus control and safety, and continued expansion of driver education courses in the high schools.

The council urges all school districts to install automatic sprinkler systems as well as fire extinguishers and fire alarms.

Antique Toys Shown at Fair

The Clackamas county fair will have a special feature this year for antique lovers.

Holly Knoll Museum, near Beavercreek, is setting up a display of antique toys. Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Fredricksen, owners of the museum, have an old hobby horse, a Civil War pony cart, a boys sleigh of 1867 and many other interesting items.

The display of girls' toys includes a wooden washer that really works and home furnishings for a girl's play house.

DAVIS COMMENDED

Carroll D. Davis, disbursing clerk second class, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley D. Davis of Rt. 1, Boring, has been commended for taking part in the discovery of hostile missiles in Cuba last year.
