Janz Reveals Plans On Berryland Move

Bob Pullen of Janz Berryland and Melvin Pickling of Hood River have purchased the Gresham Berry Growers receiving station on the western edge of Sandy. After needed repairs and improvements they will use the building as the new location for Janz Berryland. The building with its larger facilities will enable them to increase their fruit and berry stock and to offer more in the nursery line. In the coming year they hope to have on hand at least 80 varieties of trees and many additional kinds of azaleas and rhododendrons.

Within the next three years they plan to operate on this ideal site an "open air" drive-in restaurant, serving such seasonal treats as strawberry shortcake and ice cold watermelon. Plans also include a fresh do-nut stand.

By 1965 the enterprise expects to have ready a small, but well equipped, building which will make available to the public fresh chickens at wholesale prices. Arrangements for this have already been made with a local independent chicken grower, who assures that his chickens will always be fresh and of the highest quality.

In addition to planning and executing the business end of their venture, Bob and Melvin are excited about the landscaping potential of their new site. Ornamental shrubs and shade trees will be planted to enhance the natural beauty of the area while improving its shopping convenience. The open-air restaurant will be designed as a tourist, as well as a commercial, attraction in order to provide a memorable "something different" for Hoodland visitors.

Boy Scout Troop 248 went on a camping trip to the Kiwanis Camp near Government Camp a week ago. A hike up the Ski Bowl was taken by scouts wanting to pass their second class hiking while others just made the hike half way up.

Accompanying the boys was scout master Wink Chilton and four other men. (Ed. Note: Troop 248 is now on an inactive status because there does not seem to be a man in all the Sandy area who is willing to give up a little of his leisure time to act as scoutmaster.)
