

Clackamas River Road to Open This Spring

Recently, representatives of the State Highway Department, Bureau of Public Roads and the Forest Service jointly reviewed the damage and plans for reopening the Clackamas River Road (State Highway 224), Ranger McIlheny of Estacada reports.

The State Highway Department has engaged Lloyd M. Hill Construction Company to open a pioneer road between Estacada and Ripplebrook Ranger Station. Work has been completed to Whitewater. This section of road is now open to emergency traffic only.

The State Highway Department turned the rehabilitation and construction of the road over to the Bureau of Public Roads on January 10, 1965.

The Bureau of Public Roads plans to complete the construction of the pioneer road to Ripplebrook.

An island of sand, rocks, scattered logs exist up and down the Sandy river as an aftermath of the December flood. In the foreground is the channel dug out by the raging torrents of water while the original channel is just forward of the homes. Large portions of the banks were washed away leaving the two homes teetering. House in the middle is located next to the Koch Lumber Company shop at Brightwood. Years ago it was used as a dance hall. Do YOU Know I'm From Wisconsin . . .

KEN WALKER
YOUR MOBIL OIL MAN

Yes, folks, that's right. I hail from the "Win-Winsockie" state. The name of the town there, by coincidence, is Hillsboro, too.

People may wonder why a fellow like me winds up in Hoodland — in business for himself. I hear there are discoverers, inventors, outdoorsmen, etc., that come here to work and live. My reasons for coming are many and varied. Next week I'll tell you something about them.

In the meantime, I'd welcome an opportunity to serve you with the finest in heating fuel—Mobil Oil.

"See, this new box works fine," exclaims Hal Dudley, postmaster at Rhododendron, to Georgia Vermaas, postal clerk, in picture at left. On the right is a view of the new, larger postal quarters which observed "open house" last Saturday. A number of persons visited the new facility which has more than doubled its old space. Kiwanis Organizational Held

The second of a two part organizational meeting was held Thursday evening, Jan. 14, in the fellowship hall of the Presbyterian church by the Sandy Kiwanis Club.

Stressing the Kiwanis International theme for 1965, "Community Service We Build," was a filmstrip, with tape recording, presented by the civic club's leader Jim Hartman. Emphasized in the strip were the project goals for this golden anniversary year of the worldwide organization.

Following the filmstrip showing Hartman outlined some of his plans for the new year and urged Kiwanis members to work hard at their various committee assignments.

Each committee head gave a report on the plans formulated by them for this year.

Accepted into club membership was Jerry Crouse, a transfer from the Payette, Ida. club. Three other guests present at the dinner meeting were Jim Chandler, son-in-law of the local president, Marshall Glos and Mike Barnett of the high school key club.

Next Thursday's meeting will be ladies night.
