Stewarts Take Alaska Tour

A desire to travel has taken John Stewart over many miles. Early in April, John and his wife, Karla, left for Alaska. Here is their trip in diary form:

"Monday - 7 a.m. on the road.
The sun was coming up directly behind Mt. Hood as we drove into Sandy from the farm. It was one of those rare days of pure blue skies and bursting spring buds. We practically turned back before we started. It sure is hard to leave our home and family and another Oregon summer behind.
The valley was foggy as usual and it wasn't until late morning and somewhere north of Seattle that we again came under sunny skies.
The countryside around Sumas, Wash., where we crossed into Canada's beautiful square fields and dairies. It was definitely spring here too, but we remarked that the season was definitely behind western Oregon.
The Fraser River Gorge holds a special thrill for us, and we weren't disappointed again this year. The mountain tops were crowned with snow and the several dozen waterfalls were flowing full.
We noticed that the villages and stops along the route north and east of Hope, B.C., seemed somewhat quiet and sleepy. We didn't think too much of it until we stopped for gas. About 30 miles this side of Cache Creek, B. C. we pulled in for a fill-up. Then it started to dawn - the electric power was out for a hundred miles or so. Not only that, but the gas pumps wouldn't pump, and no gas was to be had. Well, -- you can't fight it, so we took a walk.
While strolling down the shoulder of the road, a car passed us, slowed, turned around and began honking wildly. We knew these Canadians were friendly, but ...
It turned out to be two smoke jumpers heading for Alaska. One we hadn't seen for two years while he was in Germany studying, and the other had spent last winter living with a Mexican family attending the University of Mexico. We had a lot to hear about, so we drank a dozen or so cups of coffee while we waited for the lights to go back on. They blinked on in an hour, and we got rolling again.
Our progress was speedy, but only for a short distance. Within a couple of miles (both cars together now), we spotted a herd of mountain sheep just above the road. Out from under all the stuff crammed in our cars came cameras, tripods, field glasses, and a 30-power spotting scope. Naturally after looking at these beasts from a distance of a quarter of a mile one wonders how close he could get to them. Well, I made it to within 100 feet of one before they casually trod up the nearly vertical cliff ahead of me. There were 27 of them, and a couple were carrying nice curls."
The Stewarts arrived in Fairbanks late the following Saturday afternoon. By Sunday afternoon they had found an apartment - "a small, but comfortable one. The whole thing is the size of our two bedrooms in Sandy, but its modern and cozy. (only $145.00!)". They have found that although wages are high in Alaska, the cost of living is also high.
What job or reason caused this young couple to go "North to Alaska" for their third year? The answer was found a few years ago.
Following graduation from Sandy High in 1957, John attended two years of college at Portland State, majoring in engineering. He spent his summers with the Forest Service. Not completely satisfied with life as it was, he trained as a smoke jumper at Missoula, Montana, and since he jumped out of planes and helicopters in Idaho, Washington, Montana, New Mexico, and Alaska, he's had many interesting experiences, including a drop into Hell's Canyon. This is his third year in Alaska, his second as a dispatcher for the Bureau of Land Management. Each summer he retrains as in emergency he would again be smoke jumping. His hours are long - 9 p.m. to 8 a.m. - 7 days a week, but by the end of this summer, he will be able to return to college full-time to work on a degree in landscape architecture. The Stewarts enjoy new scenery, new experiences, and also find these as a steppingstone to their future - thus they have made Alaska their summer home.

LIKE SPRING TONIC was the pleasant surprise felt by Francis Meeker, a retired planerman, when he learned that his was the 1000th new prescription to be filled by Brewster's Drug Store and as such entitled him to receive free, a pair of slacks of his choice. Pharmacist Ave Brewster, above, makes the presentation to Meeker, a resident of Rt. 1, Sandy. (Post Photo)

The April meeting of the Hoodland Women's Club, Inc. was held at the Log Lodge at the Rhododendron. The meeting was attended by 35 members and guests.
Guest speaker for the evening was Bob Gilmore of the U.S. Forest Service. He discussed the need of establishing a rural fire district in the Hood-Land area. Boundaries of the proposed fire district were pointed out on a map of the area and members were told of the need for 200 signatures on petitions now in circulation.
A report from the nominating committee gave the following names as candidates for office for the coming year: President - Georgia Vermaas and Margie Carothers, Vice President - Dottie Shoup, Naomi Blaisdell and Vivian Collier. The election of officers will take place at the May 2 meeting which will be held at the Zig Zag Inn.
Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee Georgia Vermaas reported on the progress of the fashion show and dance to be held at the Mt. Hood Golf Club, Saturday, April 30 at 8 p.m. The show is titled Fashions and Funnies and will be especially geared as entertainment for men as well as women. Music for the show (and for dancing later) will be provided by Joe Hillend and his combo. Tickets are available now through members or may be purchased at the door. Alma Rieck is in charge of ticket sales.
Fashions will be shown from the following places: Ellen's Klozet, Brewster's Family Store, Bowman's Gift Shop and Wheelers' Weavery.
Members of the Ways and Means Committee are: Chairman Georgia Vermaas, Co-Chairman Pat Cushman, Lavina Wilke, Veda Yancy, Alma Rieck, Florence Simmons, Lou Stauffer, Evelyn Monaghan, Juanita Anliker, Ruth Purdy, Chris Indahl and Betty Viles.
A report from Rosie Avery, chairman of the Park Committee, told of progress being made at Hoodland Park. The building budget for next year was read and discussed and compared to that of last year.
At the other end of the scale, Morrow county gained 531 vehicles and recorded the largest percentage gain in registrations -- a 14.2% increase over 1964. Jackson county also scored a substantial and more significant gain -- 5,855 more vehicles or 10.3% more than in 1964.
Clackamas county had 81,695 vehicles registered in 1965. This compares with 75,538 registrations in 1964, or a 8.15% per cent gain.
Denfon from the Women's Extension Group, Velma and Grant DeShazer from the Grange, Dr. Roy Carothers from the Lions Club and the Hood-Land Chamber of Commerce, Jim Rieck representing the Boy Scouts and District Ranger Pete Wingle of the Forest Service.

Supervisor of the Clackamas County Park Commission Dick Wilmot presided over this meeting and commended the Hoodland Women's Club for their fine effort toward the building of a community recreation center for the Hood-Land area. Wilmot made special mention of the excellent cooperation between the women's club and the county in this joint effort. He also estimated completion of the recreation building would be sometime next year.
A motion was made and passed to nominate Eileen Anderson (President of the Hoodland Women's Club, Inc.) as the representative from the Hood-Land area on the Clackamas County Park Advisory Board to fill the position left vacant by the resignation of Walt Blaisdell. A letter to this effect was sent by the club secretary to the Clackamas County Board of Commissioners.
The nomination was later accepted and the appointment approved by the Clackamas County Board of Commissioners.
Membership in the Hoodland Women's Club, Inc. is open to anyone interested in furthering the goals of the club. Regular meetings are held the first Monday of each month and are open to visitors as well as members. The next meeting will be at the Zig Zag Inn, May 2 at 7:30 p.m.

Number of Autos Climbs in County
All but one of Oregon's 36 counties recorded increases in motor vehicle registrations during 1965. The only county showing a decrease was Jefferson county with 444 fewer vehicles than in 1964, according to a report from the Department of Motor Vehicles, Statewide, 1965 registrations were up 68,273.
At the other end of the scale, Morrow county gained 531 vehicles and recorded the largest percentage gain in registrations -- a 14.2% increase over 1964. Jackson county also scored a substantial and more significant gain -- 5,855 more vehicles or 10.3% more than in 1964.
Clackamas county had 81,695 vehicles registered in 1965. This compares with 75,538 registrations in 1964, or a 8.15% per cent gain.
