Something for the Legislature

Whatever the outcome of the problems confronting Annette Buchanan, the young journalist at the University of Oregon, prompt consideration of a "confidential privilege" law for Oregon seems likely.

Oregon does not now have such a law for newsmen, although 12 other states do. Briefly, such laws give protection to newsmen who must keep confidential the sources of their information.

In 1949, such a law passed the State Senate but was killed by the House Judiciary committee. Another measure was introduced in 1959 in the House but again was killed by the Judiciary committee.

It was opposed by the American Civil Liberties Union and also by some newspapers. It had the support, however, of the state newspaper association.

The current case, obviously because it involves a young coed, has attracted nationwide interest. It seems inconceivable that she would be thrown in jail for keeping a promise to her news sources but such may, indeed, be the case.

However, it seems quite likely that another attempt will be made to pass a "confidential privilege" law in the next session of the legislature. A full head of steam already is being drawn.

Thus, it just could be that Miss Buchanan will, in effect, put something across which her fellow journalists have for years been unable to accomplish. We hope so.

Summer Jobs Are Scarce

Almost every day, we hear in one way or another of a capable youngster who just hasn't been able to find work this summer.

Sure, school-age children can pick berries but this doesn't last long. Moreover, there are only so many car-washing, lawn-cutting jobs etc., to go around.

But we think the biggest problem faces what probably is the best group of youngsters . . . those who are going on to college.

These people are not going to become permanent employees right now; they're merely looking for part time work until college classes begin.

How To Drive the Freeway

With more and more freeways being completed, we found most interesting an article recently on "How to Drive the Freeway."

The article, in a Seattle paper, had a number of excellent suggestions:

1. Learn to watch the traffic well ahead, not just a few hundred yards. In this way, you can anticipate trouble.

2. When you enter or leave a freeway, travel at normal speed. Slowing down just clogs traffic. The same rule applies when, on a freeway, you approach an access. Don't slow down unnecessarily to allow incoming traffic to merge. Travel along at your normal pace.

3. Don't try to change your mind once you've started into an exit.

4. If you do have mechanical trouble, run out of gas, have a flat tire etc., tie a white handkerchief to the aerial or raise your hood. Set out flares if you have them and turn on parking and interior lights if after dark. Stay in your car and wait for help.

5. If you do run out of gas or have a flat tire, try to get off the main roadway before coming to a halt.

State police, sheriff's officers and city police are anxious to help. Don't panic if something goes wrong.

Here's an over-the-shoulder view of the Mt. Hood Community College catalogue, now available. Printed at the Gresham Outlook, it lists the many courses which the college plans to offer this fall. It also gives detailed information about the college and its plans. Interested students may pick up copies of the catalogue at the College office in Gresham.

Letters to the Editor

(Editor's Note: The following letter was written by Donald Wood, editor of the Whitefish, Montana Pilot. We re-print it without comment.)

"Dear Kid: Today you asked me for a job. From the look of your shoulders as you walked out, I suspect you've been turned down before, and maybe you believe by now that kids out of high school can't find work."

"But, I hired a teen-ager today. You saw him. He was the one with the polished shoes and a necktie. What was so special about him? Not experience neither of you had any. It was his attitude put him on the payroll instead of you. Attitude, son, A-T-T-I-T-U-D-E. He wanted that job badly enough to shuck the leather jacket, get a haircut, and look in the phone book to find out what this company makes. He did his best to impress me. That's where he edged you out."

"You see, Kid, people who hire people aren't 'with' a lot of things. We know more about Bing than we do about Ringo, and we have some Stone Age ideas about who owes whom a living. Maybe that makes us prehistoric, but there's nothing wrong with the checks we sign, and if you want one you'd better tune to our wave length."

"Ever hear of 'empathy?' It's the trick of seeing the other fellow's side of things. I couldn't have cared less that you're behind in your car payments. That's your problem, and President Johnson's. What I needed was someone who'd go out in the plant, keep his eyes open and work for me as he'd work for himself. If you have even the vaguest idea of what I'm trying to say, let it show the next time you ask for a job. You'll be head and shoulders over the rest."

"Look, kid: The only time jobs grew on trees was while most of the manpower was wearing GI's and pulling KP. For all the rest of history you had to get a job like you get a girl: 'Case' the situation, wear a clean shirt and try to appear reasonably willing."

"Maybe jobs aren't as plentiful right now, but a lot of us can remember when master craftsmen walked the streets. By comparison, you don't know the meaning of 'scarce'."

"You may not believe it, but all around you employers are looking for young men smart enough to go after a job in the old-fashioned way. When they find one, they can't wait to unload some of their worries on him."

"For both our sakes, get eager, will you?"

Dear Sir:

I hope that through your letters-to-the-editor column I may be permitted to express my appreciation to those who worked so hard on my behalf during my recent successful effort to secure the Democratic Senatorial nomination. I appreciate the many hours of assistance by the hundreds of friends and supporters and hope I may count on and deserve their continued support. I only wish I could send each a personal letter of appreciation, but my Congressional schedule unfortunately does not permit it.

Sincerely yours,
Robert B. Duncan
Member of Congress

To The Editor:

I have read Beulah Hand's letter in your newspaper, and though it tends to establish her ability to add and subtract, it does little else.

Actually, I thought her opponent in November was to be Senator Inskip rather than the voting machines or myself. But she can rest assured that the voting machines will count all of the votes cast for her.... and against her.

Sincerely,
Robert Schumacher

Farmers Union Group Makes Annual Tour

Eight o'clock Sunday morning several F. U. members and friends left Gresham for their annual bus trip. Pick up was made along the way until at Newberg. We had 46 passengers besides our bus driver Ralph Neibauer. We have been fortunate to have Ralph as driver for previous trips. At McMinnville we toured the Linfield College Campus.

Our morning coffee break was at Grand Ronde. The coffee rolls and pie were delicious. An accordion, guitar and banjo provided music as well as accompaniment for group singing.

We stopped at several beaches. Sallisham Lodge was a beautiful place and would be fine, we thought for a vacation. The Twenty Miracle Miles provided much scenery and many interesting places such as Boiler Bay and The Devils Punch Bowl.

At Newport they were ready to serve us dinner. Our group had a room all to ourselves with good food and excellent service.

Our homeward route was by way of Monmouth where we had our after noon coffee break. We arrived in Gresham at 8:45, a little tired perhaps, but agreed that it had been an enjoyable day. Some of us wondering where the destination would be next year.

Saturday evening Kelo local was host to the Clackamas County Union Quarterly meeting, in the Woman's Club Hall.

After a pot luck supper the meeting was called to order by Chairman Netter. Visitors were introduced and reports given.

Mrs. Kenneth Fox sang four selections from Sounds of Music. Her two little daughters helped her in one number. They were accompanied by Daisy Connell. Needless to say we all enjoyed this so much.

A representative of the Moormans products was speaker. He showed slides of the heel fly. The life cycle, how the fly works, the grub stage, how it affects cattle and told about control. Questions were asked, and it proved to be a very interesting discussion as well as being informative. Most of us, I am sure, have never realized the damage these insects can do. Coffee was served following the meeting.

News and Views About Mt. Hood Community College

LIBRARY SHIPMENTS
Mrs. Eleanor Pruitt, Mt. Hood Community College librarian, announced this week that the college library has processed orders for the first of several shipments of books and other library materials to arrive within the next two weeks. Mrs. Pruitt said that with the availability of I.B.M. and other computer services, the ordering and processing are easier and faster than in the past.

DEANS' MEETING
Dr. Leo Marlantes, dean of instruction, will attend a meeting of community college deans of instruction at Coos Bay, July 13-14. Deans of instruction have as their major responsibility the direction of all instructional processes in the colleges.

CONTINUING EDUCATION
Mt. Hood Community College will cooperate with the Division of Continuing Education in bringing upper division and graduate level courses to the residents of the district. The Continuing Education Program has been available through the local high schools along with adult education programs for many years. The college's involvement in both adult education and continuing education will provide additional courses and activities for students and adults of the district.

ADULT EDUCATION
One of the many programs to be offered by the community college is the adult education program. This program is not directly related to the college transfer program, nor is it specifically a part of the vocational and occupational program. It is instead a curriculum which offers to adults in the area a no-credit program for personal improvement, pleasure, recreation, etc. Many of the courses offered under the adult education program are equivalent to college level transfer courses but carry no credit and require no examinations.

Although many of the area high schools already have extensive adult education programs, the college will supplement -- not supplant -- those programs already in operation. Both the adult and continuing education programs will be principally evening classes as well as will be many of the regular college offerings.

BY ALAN GOODELL
VOCATIONAL DIRECTOR ARRIVES
Arnie Heuchert, director of vocational-technical education, assumes full-time duties this week. Even though he has not been at Mt. Hood in person, Heuchert has directed the development of programs and courses by letter and telephone for two months. Advisory committees and lay groups are being formed to assist the college in the immediate and long range planning of occupational training programs.

Last Thursday the college board approved the Multnomah County Board of Commissioners' agreement to rent the county fairgrounds in Gresham for temporary campus site for 1966-1967. The college plans to supplement existing facilities at the fairgrounds with portable classrooms and some high school rooms for specialized classes.
