CAB Nears End of Crash Probe Here

The on-site investigation by the Civil Aeronautics Board into the cause of the Oct. 1 West Coast Airlines plane crash in the Salmon Mountain area of the Zig Zag Ranger District is virtually complete, although the cause of the accident is still unsolved.

The CAB has already removed from the scene for further study all equipment, gear and portions of the wreckage that might be of any significance in determining the cause of the crash of the ill-fated DC9. However, before releasing the remains of the jetliner to West Coast Airlines and its insurance company, the investigating team is planning a complete air survey of the area. This scrutiny, which will be done from a helicopter when the weather is favorable, will examine the final route of the doomed plane to determine if broken branches of trees in the wild and densely wooded locality might yield some clue to the disaster that took the lives of all 18 passengers and crew members.

District Ranger Pete Wingle told this newspaper today that West Coast Airline officials have already made plans for the disposal of the wreckage once it is turned over to them. The roughness of the area making it impossible to remove -- the wreckage, including the nearly intact tail assembly and the jet engines (except for parts removed by the CAB), will be further destroyed on the scene.

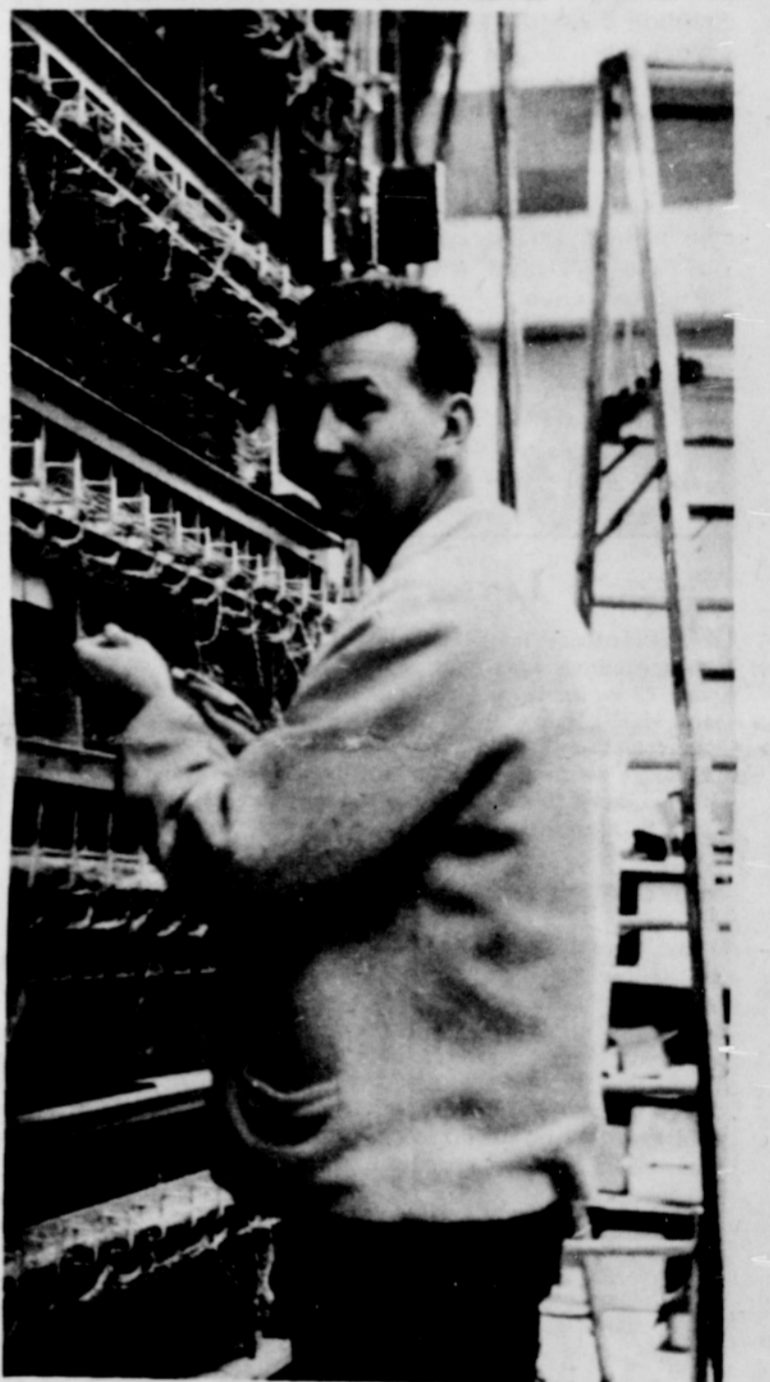

Because of fear the wreckage might become an "attractive nuisance" to thrill seekers, even though it is in a remote and almost unapproachable part of the Forest District, Wingle said it is planned to burn the tail section and bury as much of the ruins as possible by dynamiting holes into the rugged outcropping of the mountainside.

To further obliterate the scene of the wreckage, Wingle said plans call for falling trees in the area, dead or dying from the intense fire that followed the jet's impact, and cleaning up other crash caused debris.

The Army is also undertaking salvage operations on its helicopter that crashed Friday while attempting to land investigators at the rough helispot near the accident scene.

Fortunately no serious injuries resulted from this crash, although like the Douglas jet it, too, was factory-new, having been delivered to the Army but the day before and had only recorded a total of 29 flying hours.

Brewsters Sell Sandy Store

The sale of their Cedar Plaza Drug and Department Store business was announced this week by owners Averytt and Ginny Brewster.

Purchaser of the business is pharmacist John Stoll, former college classmate of Brewster's, who but recently had acquired a partnership in the

The Brewsters, who moved to Sandy from California three years ago, completed building of the new Cedar Plaza facility only last year after operating a successful family department store at a previous location in Sandy for two years. Brewster, who is a registered pharmacist, said he plans to continue to help "when needed" in the pharmacy, but sold the business so that he and his wife could devote their time to development of the rest of their Cedar Plaza property.

He explained that he and his wife still retain ownership of the building and while their plans are not yet definite, they embrace the building of other facilities on the site that might "include anything from a medical clinic to a restaurant and motel."

Stoll, the new owner, who lives with his wife and two children in a recently purchased home on Music Camp Rd. near Sandy, said he plans to continue to operate the business on the already established policy of personalized, friendly and courteous service with the emphasis on economy and customer satisfaction.

He emphasized that credit purchases will continue to be available to all through Bank-AmeriCards.

UGN Volunteers Start Door-to-Door Drive

Sandy Mountain United Good Neighbors full campaign force will be in action for the first time, beginning Thursday (Oct. 13).

The Sandy-Mountain residential, or door-to-door campaign, officially kicks off Thursday. Until now, the division has been working to organize the area into sections for solicitors to cover.

Phil Jonsrud of Jonsrud Real Estate, Sandy, Sandy-Mountain Residential Chairman, said: "We've had a long time to organize, and now we're ready to begin. This year large numbers of workers are more important than ever before. The reason is, we have a much shorter time to complete our part of the campaign. Before, we've always worked until the end of the drive. This year, we're trying a new concept, which we call 'Good Neighbor Week'."

Communities throughout the Tri-County area will be observing "Good Neighbor Week" from October 13 to 20th. The bulk of the solicitation will be done in this one-week period. The next week (until Oct. 27) will be used to contact any whom it is impossible to reach in the first week of solicitation.

"Our quota this year is $551,000, which is a lot of money to raise in two weeks time. I am confident, however, that this goal can be reached. Naturally, the more solicitors we have, the better. If there is anyone who would like to work on the campaign, we will be more than happy to have them on our team. They may volunteer their services by calling UGN headquarters at 228-9131, or by phoning me at MU 7-2022."

In their efforts to reach their goal, Mr. Jonsrud and his volunteers will cover every block of every street, every apartment house, trailer court, and residential unit in the area.

Dr. Robert Schouten, of Mt. Hood Dental Bldg., Sandy, UGN District Chairman, commented: "Contributions raised in the door-to-door campaign have always figured prominently in the overall success of the UGN drive. Many times in the history of UGN campaigns, it has been the residential drives that have been responsible for achievement of the UGN goal. We hope that each call at each door will result in a generous contribution."

Volunteers are urgently needed to help in the United Good Neighbors residential campaign according to Phil

Jonsrud, Sandy-Mountain Chairman of the annual fund drive.

"We are asking for volunteers to give an hour of their time and they need not go out of their own neighborhood," said Jonsrud, "if enough people offer their services, the burden will be lighter for everyone."

The Sandy realtor requests those interested in helping to contact him at this office on Main St. and First Ave. or by phone MU 7-2022 or MU 7-6201.

Dial Office Here Nears Completion

West Coast Telephone's new dial office in Sandy is now 85 per cent completed, District Manager Roger Danek said this week.

The 30 KW emergency generator which will keep the office operating in case of power failure is already installed and on stand-by alert.

The dial equipment in place and the nine-man crew under Foreman Duane Shepard is currently "running the mainframe jumpers" -- the thousands of tiny wires which connect (jumper) the equipment inside to the telephone cables and lines outside. As soon as the wiring is completed, they will start the test procedures which will insure that everything in the new office is "go" by the Dec. 17 cutover date.

"We're right on schedule," Danek said, "and Sandy customers can look forward to both improved service and new telephone numbers on December 17."

On that date, he added, the present "MU7" prefix will be dropped and all new seven-digit numbers beginning with the prefix "668" will become effective. Customers will receive new number plates for their telephone dials prior to the conversion, and the all-number listings will be contained in the new telephone directory which becomes effective December 17.

"There is one service which will not become effective when the new office goes into operation," Danek said, "and that is Extended Area Service between Sandy and Portland. However, studies are presently being conducted to determine the feasibility of establishing this type of service at a later date."

First Aid Classes Due

Classes in Standard First Aid will start this month Sandy Fire Chief Lyle Seaman announced today.

Under the instruction of Chief Danek, the classes will be held at the Fire Hall beginning Thursday Oct. 20, from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. The ten-hour course takes about four weeks to complete and is open to all interested persons free of charge.

The standard course will be followed by Advanced First Aid classes beginning about Nov. 17. Completion of the standard course is a prerequisite for enrollment in the advanced classes, Seaman explained.
