A New Brand of Isolationism?

Is the United States--wounded by the terrible misadventure in Viet-Nam--heading towards a new kind of isolationism?

There are abundant signs we may be. Our European allies are openly worried lest we turn our back on their problems, and our part in them. They see us striking some sort of an accommodation with the Russians and perhaps the Chinese and then withdrawing behind a wall of ICBMs. The same feeling is being expressed here, too. As the fruitless, inconclusive war in Viet-Nam drags on, more and more people are saying we should pull in our global horns.

At the very least, the American people are not soon going to acquiesce in another Viet-Nam type adventure. Even should we somehow get out of that one, it is inconceivable that we would again give another president carte blanche to drag us into war, without Congressional approval.

World War II, many historians feel, developed largely because America turned inward after World War I. In a dozen ways, the world is too small for us ever again to abdicate our global responsibilities.

But the extent of those responsibilities certainly is arguable. They do not, many people feel, include becoming involved in a land war in Asia nor, Sec. Rusk to the contrary, policing the world.

The longer the war in Viet-Nam drags on, the more disillusionment with our foreign policy will spread. An inward-turning towards isolationist doctrines most assuredly would result.

The casualties of Viet-Nam eventually may include far more than the battle dead.

No Emergency Fund for Schools

Does the state have any sort of an emergency fund which it can tap to help school districts which fail to pass their budget?

The answer is a flat, unqualified "No."

Unless a district passes its budget each spring, there just could not be any school in the fall.

The question has particular local relevance these days because of budget problems in Rockwood, Corbett and Damascus school districts. All have failed, thus far, to pass their 1968-69 budget.

Some voters have said, in effect,

"So what...the state will come along with money to keep the schools open."

But the state won't, the state can't. There just is no fund from which monies could be drawn to keep a school district operating. Some equalization is available, of course, but these funds would be totally inadequate to keep a school operating for any length of time.

In other words, the voters must approve something. Unless they do, the schools just won't operate next fall. No one else is going to pick up the tab.

Column Comments

by Jack Parsons--Clackamas County Extension Agent

Thousands of part-time workers are now beginning the harvest of fruits and vegetables in Clackamas County. This work force includes hundreds of students who learn first-hand the meaning of the words "work" and "to earn your money." Most youngsters enjoy this experience and the opportunity to earn through their own efforts. It is wonderful to see the youngsters out in the fields, rather than idling their time away and relying on generous parents to hand out money for their needs.

My beliefs may be old-fashioned but isn't it better for youngsters to earn some part of their spending money and to have a goal to work towards. Picking strawberries and other fruits and vegetables in Clackamas County provides such an opportunity. The youngsters deserve a lot of credit for their willingness to do this and the parents, too, for their encouragement.

I hope that this tradition can be maintained in the future and the youngsters will always have the opportunity for this farm experience.

Sometimes events that happen far away from our area and appear not to have immediate consequence, go unnoticed. Perhaps such an incident is the boycott of California grapes in New York City. The New York metropolitan area chain stores agreed to local unions demand not to handle California grapes unless migrant labor problems in California are remedied. This decision will go into effect Monday, June 10. By requesting that the chain stores boycott California grapes, the unions hope to strengthen the position of the United Farm Workers Organization (AFL-CIO) in organizing the grape workers in California. Shirley Boring, daughter of the Willard Borings, has won a fellowship in team teaching at the University of New Hampshire during the 1968-69 year. She will concentrate on special teaching of reading, and will work toward a master's degree. She has been employed as a second grade teacher in Canby and is on leave from that school system during the next season.

table grapes shows the extent to which unions are going to organize farm labor, this will give them control over food supply and movement in America from field to marketbasket.

The concern of many in Oregon is the effect of unionization on our local agriculture. The type of farming that exists in California is completely different from farming in Clackamas County. Most local farms are family enterprises which rely heavily upon school children to harvest their fruit and vegetable crops. These are important traditions which should be protected and preserved.

It's Your Law

Mary's housework was interrupted one day by a knock on the door. At the door was a deputy sheriff. "I have a summons for Mrs. Mary A. Smith, 123 Fourth Street. Are you Mrs. Mary A. Smith?" he asked.

"Yes, I am," she replied. The deputy then handed Mary a paper and left.

Mary had just been legally notified that someone had filed a case against her in court. The deputy would note that Mary had been properly served with the notice. The court which issued the summons would expect her to be present to answer the charges filed against her. The case could now proceed, so far as the court and the plaintiff (the person filing the charges) were concerned.

Mary's first action should be to contact her attorney to determine the problem and what legal steps should be taken. She will have a certain number of days in which to file an answer in court to the charges. Should she ignore the summons, the court might rule in favor of the plaintiff. That would leave Mary with a default judgment against her for a certain amount of money or property or for the relief asked for in the complaint.

Once Mary is properly notified, the court assumes she will do what she feels is necessary to do.

The summons should not be confused with a subpoena. Had Mary been served with a subpoena, it would mean she is needed as a witness in a court case. The subpoena commands her to testify in the case. If she is properly served with the subpoena but fails to appear in court, she can be arrested and charged with contempt of court. This could mean a fine or possible jail sentence.

Whatever the situation, if you are served with a summons or subpoena, it is a formal legal notice. Don't ignore it.

Jim had just received notice that his reserve unit had been called to active duty. He and his wife had just rented a new apartment and signed a one year lease.

Jim explained his position to his new landlord, but he would not agree to cancel the lease. "We made a deal," he insisted.

What can Jim do? Can the landlord hold him to the terms of the lease?

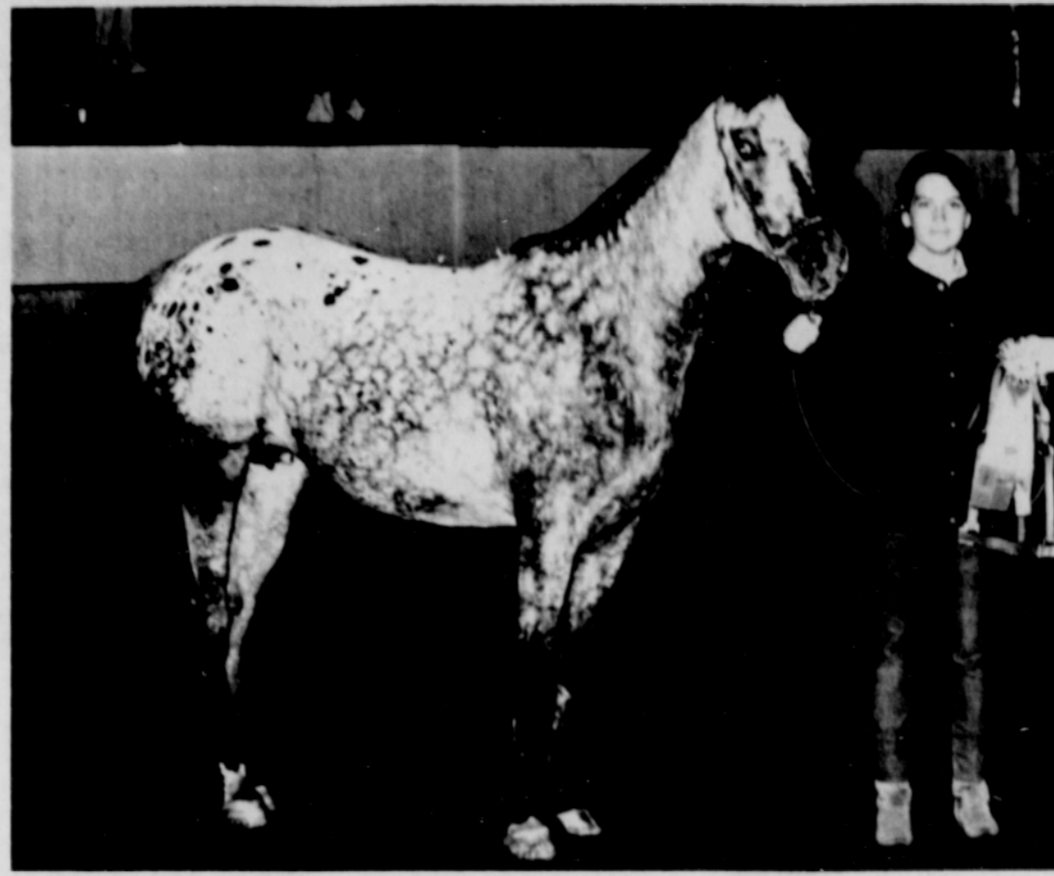

No, Jim could not be held to the terms of the lease. The Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act comes to Jim's aid. It allows him to terminate the lease by giving his landlord 30 days written notice.

This act is a federal law seeking to strengthen the national defense. It suspends the enforcement of civilian liabilities of servicemen in certain cases. No one can take a default judgment against a serviceman. Thus persons called to perform military duties can devote their entire energy to the defense needs of the nation.

Had Jim been buying a home and making monthly payments, he might have been able to postpone mortgage payments during the period of military service and could have had a reasonable period of time after his release in which to make the payments. However, such a postponement requires court action and is not possible in all cases.

Other provisions in the act deal with the payment of life insurance premiums while the insured is in the military service, and provide for delay in payment of taxes or assessments during the period of military duty.

Jim, as well as other persons entering any branch of the military service, whether by means of the draft, call-up or reserve units, or enlistments, should check the provisions of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act in the light of their own personal problems.

Hawaii Mission Calls Sandy Girl

Linda Kaye Davis of Sandy left yesterday by plane for the Hawaiian Islands where she will work for the next month with Youth Mobilized Missions. The Y.M.M. is a program of the Oregon District Youth Dept. of the Assemblies of God.

Linda is one of 18 young people who were chosen to go to Hawaii. She will help with Vacation Bible Schools and other church work.

Linda is the daughter of the Rev. Jim Davis, pastor of the Sandy Assembly of God Church, and Mrs. Davis.

Sandy Art Club News

The Sandy Art Group will have their last class of the season, Monday, June 24, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Pete Sulzbach, Rt. 3, Box 560, Floyd Hanor, the teacher, will lead the students in sketching the Sulzbach's beautiful view of Mt. Hood and the Sandy River Valley. At noon there will be a potluck luncheon.

The class will resume September 9, in the Woman's Club Hall, Mr. Hanor will again be the instructor.

During the four Mondays of July, any of the students who wish to paint without an instructor will meet at usual in the club hall. A small fee will be charged for opening the hall. Anyone interested is invited to attend.

Members of the Sandy Art Group have been invited to show pictures at the Gresham Raspberry Festival July 20th. More definite details will be given later.

The students will meet at the Club Hall next Monday at 9 a.m. so anyone who does not know the way to the Sulzbach home will be directed.

Gresham Man Arraigned In Tool Theft

Billy Joe Smith, 34, Rt. 2, Box 742, Gresham, was arraigned in Multnomah County District Court Monday on a charge of stealing some $2,000 worth of tools from nine Paul B. Emerick Co., buildings on the Mt. Hood Community College campus early Monday morning.

According to Gresham Police Detective Joe Wooley, Smith was arrested by Gresham Police on the campus. A search warrant revealed various tools in the trunk of his automobile. Smith was released by district court Judge Carl Edling Monday on his own recognition. A hearing date is pending.

--- LETTER BOX ---

To the Editor:

I wish to take this means to thank the concerned voters of Clackamas County who supported me on election day. The turnout by the voters was excellent, and they are to be congratulated for practicing their constitutional responsibility.

It is unfortunate that our county elections must be shadowed by doubts and suspicions. The breakdown of our election procedure has prompted concerned citizenry to rise up in indignation. We asked very early in the year that voter educational information be submitted with clarity, before the primary. This involved name rotation policy which conflicts with the sample ballots: The removal of non-associated toggle keys from the voting machine: A clear and concise explanation of the machine operation: An opportunity to verify that each machine was accurate in its programming: A fair positioning of names to afford all candidates equal advantage with the registered voters of his or her party. Our concern fell on deaf ears, and our reasoning was scoffed at.

It is up to the people to make their observations known or they must be satisfied with a continuation of existing policies.

I will continue to stand fast on a platform of welfare of the people to replace welfare for the people. Pre-prepared legislative proposals shall be filed for another two years when we will again offer to represent the people of Clackamas County. Again, thanks to everyone who supported me for position 4 and congratulations to the winners on all sides.

Chevelle Malibu Sport Coupe

Chevelle prices not only start a full $100 less than other mid-size cars--it's more car.

We've thought of things for Chevelle that other mid-size cars would like you to forget.

For instance, that taut-lined package above gives you a ride that rivals bigger higher priced cars. (That's because we thought to give it Full Coil suspension. And a separate frame with a computer-refined mounting system cushioning its body by Fisher.)

The choice of engines and transmissions you have is the greatest in Chevelle's field. And if you're a performance buff, you'll find we did some thinking on your wave length: black-grilled $5 396's with Turbo-Jet V8 power you can order up to 350 horses strong.

You also get more ways of putting your personal stamp on a Chevelle than any other mid-size car offers. Take wheel covers alone. You can order simulated wire ones. Or mag-style. Or mag-spoke. Or rally-type.

Even so, Chevelle prices start a full $100 under any competitive mid-size cars.

How's that for a parting thought!
