VOCATIONAL-TECHNICAL PROGRAMS

When Fall quarter begins at Mt. Hood Community College Sept. 30, 10 new technical program or options will be available for students, according to Arnie Heuchert, director of the college's professional and technical programs.

Such programs as Chemical Technology, Drafting, Food Processing, Medical Secretary and Radio and Television Broadcasting will be offered. Advisory committees of citizens who are involved in related industries have been instrumental in developing the programs, Heuchert said. Each program has been approved by the state department of education.

Information about any program or courses at Mt. Hood Community College may be obtained by telephoning 665-1131 or by visiting the college's south campus at 257th (KANE) and Cochrane Road.

SUMMER SESSION

In about two weeks the second summer session offered by MHCC will conclude. Over 500 students registered for class this summer, more than anticipated. Even greater numbers will be attending in future summers as facilities are completed and the college's year 'round programs become more fully developed.

COLLEGE CATALOG COVER

Several persons have asked where the college personnel obtained a photograph of Mt. Hood which is used on the cover of the new 1968-69 MHCC catalog. We need to credit Mt. Hood National Forest district information and education office on 122nd street with this service. They have been most helpful in making available to college personnel many different photographs from which the cover shot was selected.

College Move Set for 1972

Target date for Columbia Christian College's new campus near Linneman Junction is 1972.

Don Boyce, the college's public relations director, made that prediction to the Chamber of Commerce Monday. Boyce was on hand to introduce the college's singing group, "The Newcomers", which appeared at the Chamber luncheon.

Columbia Christian recently purchased a 275-acre hilltop tract near Linneman Junction for its new home. The college, a two-year junior college, presently is housed in Portland. A high school also will eventually move onto the new site.

The first national bank was incorporated by Congress in 1781.

EXCITED SHRIEKS and lots of laughter are heard from the midway at the county fair grounds as fun seekers of all ages try out the rides. Wide assortment of rides have been set up by West Coast shows for the 62nd annual county fair in Gresham.

Nell's Notes

By NELL HOWE
Hood-Land Reporter

Another birthday for July discovered. Congratulations to Wayne Huddleston, and also to Louise Hallam, Wayne's birthday is on the 19th and Louise's is on the 25th. Doris and Wayne spent some time in Beaver, visiting friends. They said it was lovely down there, and they had a most enjoyable time.

Was looking over the Horseshoe for all of us July babies, and had a great time finding out what super beings we are. On the front page (in italics, yet), it says, "Great intelligence," How about that?!! "Intense emotions, the ability to assist others and perseverance," plus the fact that we are not always truthful, so we have to try to be accurate above everything else. Loved that last one. There were some illustrious people born in July. Even some from our family tree. John Jacob Astor, who was either a two-greater three-great, grandfather of mine. Elias Howe, who was a relation on Dave's side; Calvin Coolidge, Julius Ceasar (there was a charmer) but he lied a lot, Amelia Earhart, John D. Rockefeller, George Sand, Nathaniel Hawthorne, Rembrandt, George M. Cohan, Mary Baker Eddy, William M. Thackeray, and Henry David Thoreau, just to name a few of the great ones that were born in July. It is just as well they are nearly all gone, and that way they won't be confused by us later July babies. Also, all you July characters, when you reach 40, life from there on is supposed to be really on the upgrade. I must have rushed through that part, and missed some of it. But the next phase sounds good, also, so don't give up hope.

Our deepest sympathy to Hazel Goldthorpe and family, for the loss of her uncle, Al Hazlett, of Merritt, B.C. Hazel drove her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bliven, of Portland, up to Merritt for the funeral. Mr. Hazlett was Mrs. Bliven's brother. They came back through Hope, where they used to live, and stopped in Bellingham to visit with other relations. In spite of the sad mission they were on, they enjoyed the scenery and seeing relations and friends again. Hazel said it was awfully hot up there. Makes one appreciate the lovely mountains.

Took off Sunday and visited another spot in these parts that we had never been to. Went to Kinzel Lake and picnicked with the Eastle Brewers and family. Even met one of the Forest Service employees, on a single lane road and, as we pulled off for him, he stopped and chatted. He even apologized for the road. We didn't think it was a bad road at all. I don't think I'd like to take a good car over it, but we have certainly been on worse ones. After all, it is a primitive area, and that is the way they want to keep it. If they make a paved highway out of it, they have lost what they are striving to achieve. It is beautiful country and the view is magnificent from the top of the hill. Don't expect a great big lake if you should trek up there. It is just sorta a large mudpuddle, not too deep, water not cold, and the kids love to play in it. The brush busters make lots of trips in that area, and have made roads here and there that I wouldn't even attempt in a pick-up, and they don't expect you to. The camp grounds have water and tables and rest rooms and lots of trees. There are trails for hiking, etc. I think it would be a great place to go on horseback, and camp out. The trails should cover some outstanding country. Looking towards Mt. Jefferson, you can see all the places that have been logged off, it kinda looks as though the hills have had a bad case of exzema. Thirty years ago most of that above Trillium Lake had been burnt over and the C.C.C. planted the trees in that area. I know now what a thirty year old three looks like. Dave had been in the C.C.C.'s then, and was on the tree planting detail. We came back down through Still Creek, and they have certainly made an excellent road up to the Trillium Lake cut-off. Dusty but good. They have also widened it. The streams are certainly low. Cool Creek is just a mere drizzle, and most of the other streams are running way low. They weren't kidding when they said it would be a dry summer. Is there anyone that has any use for empty spoons? I saw a lot, and I guess I just haven't ever thrown any of the spoons away because I came upon a box full of them. If anyone wants them just holler, cause I am going to throw them away. I have no idea what to do with them. In fact, the only thing I even know what to do with them, is to make the Rat-a-Tats we used on the windows at Halloween, and I think I am a bit far gone to start that again. But I will keep a couple just in case.
