

Nell's Notes

By NELL HOWE
Hood-Land Reporter

Having been gone for two didn't want to go up it. Plenty of weeks, hope you can take white water there. We docked at Lewiston at 4 certainly weren't bored, so p.m. hope this doesn't bore you.

Tuesday before we left we Clyde and Tula Phelps, Dorthy and Louis Phelps, us, and Jim and Lorraine Lyne, of Corvallis, took off on Sunday morning of Labor Day weekend. We went through Walla Walla, Wash. and stopped at the Lewis and Clark Trail Campground.

The poor guy that took our money, had never heard of Wemme, Welches, Zig Zag or Rhododendron, and by the time he got that all straight we were very much in doubt if he knew where Oregon was. But he was very nice, in spite of all his confusion.

Monday night, after driving over what seemed to be half of the area outside of Lewiston, Idaho, and having decided that Idaho had a great lack of campgrounds, we stopped at a KOA campground on Highway 12. This one is called KY-O-Tee KOA Campground and is run by Mrs. Barbara Clark. It is a new campground, only a year old. The restrooms and showers are a complete delight.

The Clarks were most charming and made camping a pleasure.

We also drove up the Clearwater River, which is a beautiful river, and can't understand why they don't have some campgrounds on it. Tuesday evening, Mert and Emma Wheeler joined us for dinner and we planned our morning meeting to go up the Snake River.

Up at 4:30 Wednesday morning, down to Lewiston where we met Mert and Emma for breakfast and off to the dock to board our boat.

Mert and Emma had presented us with a huge watermelon the night before, so decided we would take it with us. When we got to the dock, I was carrying the melon, and the poor kid that took our baggage, just stood and stared at me for a minute, then said, "Your first person that ever brought one of those with you." So guess it was a first on the River's navigation boat.

We took off at 7 a.m. for one of the most fabulous, magnificent two day trips I have ever been on. The weather was the best, the scenery was out of this world, the company was the greatest. Besides the 10 of us, there were 14 other people on the boat, plus the pilot, Dick Rivers, and his copilot, Elmer Earl.

We also stopped along the way delivering the mail.

Where the Salmon River and the Snake River meet, is where we put in for lunch.

We arrived at our night camp around 4 p.m. The dinner bell rings at 6:30. Such food, you wouldn't believe. Huge spencer steaks, scalloped potatoes, sliced tomatoes, peas, bread and butter, and scrumptious cake.

Behind the dining area, is a small white building with a sign that says, "Saloon—Elmer Earl, Prop." In this building is an old piano, with most of the ivory off the keys, an old chair, and some benches along the wall. Mert was in playing around with the piano, after dinner. Elmer came in and after a few duets, Mert convinced him he should play. Elmer was really going to town. All the old songs, we sang and we danced.

The next morning breakfast was at 6:30, and what a breakfast. Hot cakes, as light as a feather, bacon, sausage, eggs, juice, coffee and tea. Stacks of everything, and as fast as a platter was emptied, it was filled and replaced. By seven we were on the river again for the final 37 miles of the trip.

We ended right under Hat Point, of the Wallows, and looking up that 7,000 feet to the lookout tower, it didn't seem possible that we had been standing up there last year looking down. We returned to the night camp for lunch and another stupendous meal.

On the way up, we docked at Elmer Earl's old home where we went ashore and Elmer took us up to the Indian Petroglyphs, plus told the story of the pictures.

After lunch, we started the homeward trip. Rivers also took us part way up the Salmon River, just to show us why we

VISIT WELCHES SCHOOL LIBRARY

A new school library at Welches? There have been so many changes in the school library that it almost seems like a new one.

At this point there are 350 new books to start the school year and more orders are coming. The Oregonian, the National Observer, and the Sandy Post have been added to the subscription list. Several new titles of magazines are also arriving.

Because of the acoustical flooring which has also been added to the library, many classes have been using the library as a place to hold class meetings. This new flooring absorbs sounds so well that the library has become an ideal place for studying and for recreational reading.

Feel free to come and visit your library. The librarian will be most happy to show you around!
