

BOATS BY the dozens will again be the center ring attraction at the Portland International Boat, Trailer and Sport Show in the Memorial Coliseum Jan. 13 through 21. A national boom in boat sales included an 80 per cent increase in sailboat unit sales, and a $4 billion market overall in 1972. Northwest marinas are gearing for a record year in 1973.

Aliens need to report

William L. Pattillo, District Director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, urged all aliens in the State of Oregon who have not yet filled out alien address report forms, to do so before Jan. 31, at the nearest Immigration and Naturalization Service Office or local Post Office.

The Immigration Official pointed out that the law requires all non-citizens, except persons in diplomatic status and foreign representatives to certain international organizations, such as the United Nations, to report their addresses to the Government each January.

Pattillo added: "The parent or legal guardian of an alien child under 14 years of age must fill out the address report form for such a child in order to comply with the law."

Pattillo advised: "It is easy for an alien to meet this requirement. He just goes to the nearest Immigration and Naturalization Service Office or Post Office, fills out the address report form, and returns it to the clerk. Any non-citizen who is ill may send a friend or relative to obtain the card for him, and return it to the clerk after it has been completed by the alien. For those unable to personally return the cards, they may be mailed to the Immigration and Naturalization Service."

The Immigration Official said 12,000 aliens in the State of Oregon have already filled out address reports. He estimated that 26,000 such reports will be submitted before Jan. 31.

Group finds concern over school financing

Economic problems facing all fields of higher education are a great and growing public concern, according to Ursel C. Narver, new president of Colleges for Oregon's Future, a statewide citizens organization which since 1964 has sought "public understanding of the post-high school educational needs of Oregon."

Narver explained that his conclusion is based upon feedback from recent public forums on higher education and upon an open-ended survey of Oregonians' prime concerns conducted by Colleges for Oregon's Future.

He said that economic-based worries of the public about higher education fit into two categories:

1. How should adequate funding be provided for the public and independent colleges and universities and the community colleges—using what mix of revenue from state, local, federal, private and tuition sources?

2. How should courses and degrees dovetail with the present and future employment market?

More than half of the respondents in the survey voiced opinions about various problems of financing higher education, ranging from the conclusion that colleges "need a more stable means of financing" to the view that continuing effort should be made "to improve the use of available funds."

Half of the respondents from all over the state also expressed "an increasing concern that jobs are not available to students upon graduation," as William Huggins of Coos Bay stated it. Several said that career education should receive greater emphasis and that the counseling of students, before and during college, should improve.

Other unprompted views touched upon modernizing the curriculum, improving teaching, supplementing scholarships and financial aid, improving coordination among institutions, and "helping students develop into responsible and responsive citizens," in the words of Rev. Alfred S. Tyson of Roseburg.

Some respondents suggested that college faculty and staff members should become more involved in community affairs and that "colleges need to improve their public image, explain when criticism is unjust."

Unlike in previous years, there was little evidence of public concern about "campus unrest."

Narver said that a detailed report of the survey is available to interested persons. He asked that inquiries be directed to CFOB at PO Box 1485, Portland 97207.

The chairman indicated that further feedback projects—among them public forums and surveys—will be conducted during 1973 and the findings made available to decision-makers involved in mapping the future of post-high school educational opportunity.
