Here are a few tips from professional drivers that can greatly increase your gasoline mileage:

- Avoid prolonged idling such as at a railroad crossing. It's far more economical to shut off the engine.
 - Slow down from your usual speed, keeping a light, steady foot on the gas pedal.
 - Check tire pressure regularly. Underinflation especially hurts fuel economy.
 - Avoid jackrabbit starts. Do the same for sudden acceleration while driving.
 - Keep your car in tune. Tests show a tune-up can save over a gallon of gasoline in every tankful.
- Any of the above will improve your mileage. But the most important are regular, expert tune-ups. Let our professional mechanics attend to yours. Once a year or every 10,000 miles.
