

Camp Fire girls seek volunteers

"You don't have to be a mother to be a Camp Fire leader, you just have to enjoy young people," says Arlene Meehan, executive director of Mt. Hood Council of Camp Fire Girls.

The career woman can find it very rewarding to take over the leadership of a group. "It's good for the ego," she smiled. "They will immediately feel the respect and interest of these youngsters who enjoy the friendship of a young adult." If you are a mother you don't have to be the mother of girls.

Those who have a brood of boys can find it refreshing to be with girls for a change. Mrs. Meehan emphasized that you don't even have to be a woman. More and more dads across the country are learning the joy of Camp Fire leadership. And teams of moms and dads are very successful. Teams can take on a group—each on a part time basis, or each handling the part of the program that fits her skills.

What you have to be is fond of girls, interested in the world and generous with some of your spare time. "Mt. Hood Council has about 150 orphans-girls who want to take part in the exciting Camp Fire program, but can't because of a shortage of leaders," she said. Give a few hours of your time to the future, to watching girls grow and helping them learn to be women. That is what Camp Fire is all about. Call the Camp Fire office at 656-2987 for more information and a chance to have a hand in shaping the future.

Eight of the county fairs held in Oregon in 1974 received ratings of 900 or more points of a possible 1,000 from the Oregon County Fair Commission.

The ratings, based on a criteria that can be applied to any size fair, are not on a competitive basis. They are used in determining the distribution of the county fairs' share of Oregon racing revenues. Only two counties with populations exceeding 100,000 population had rating of 900 points or above on their fairs.

Fair rates high

Lane County received 988 points and Clackamas County 901 points. In third place was Washington County with 891 points.

Vandals broke the front window on Debbie Dee's apparel shop, 111 Main Street in Sandy last Monday. The same morning a door latch at Harry's Upholstery, located next door, was discovered broken.

Sandy Police report nothing was taken from either store.

Vandals hit businesses

Information on the production of grains, grass seeds and problems related to these crops will be handled by Sprowls on Mondays and Thursdays of each week, reports Extension Agent Clayton Wills.

County extension receives new man

The Clackamas County Extension program has been strengthened by the addition of a new staff member during the past month.

Fremont Sprowls, long-time agent in Multnomah County will be dividing his time between Multnomah and Clackamas Counties with work and assistance to farm crops producers. Information on the production of grains, grass
