Camp Fire day camps offered

Girls, entering second-eighth grades, and boys entering second and third grades, have an opportunity to experience a variety of activities this summer at day camps sponsored by the Mt. Hood Council of Camp Fire Girls, Inc.

Children from the following areas will be served by the day camp located at the Eagle Creek Elementary School, July 19 through July 23 Sandy, Boring, Estacada, Eagle Creek and Damascus.

Program plans include arts and crafts, nature activities, music, sports and games, drama, outdoor skills, field trips and special events.

Sponsors say plans have been formulated with the thought that each child is an individual, with her own needs and interests.

In order to accommodate maximum local attendance, the council (which services over 2,000 girls in Clackamas County) has been divided into five geographic areas, with a day camp located in each area. It is the goal of the Mt. Hood Council to locate a day camp within ten miles of 80 per cent of the current membership.

For more information on registration and on becoming a volunteer day camp counselor, call the Camp Fire office at 653-2600.
