IED hires specialist

Eric Bigler of Oregon City has been hired as a development services specialists by the Clackamas Intermediate District (IED).

In this position which began Jan. 3, Bigler will work with the IED and county school districts to obtain federal funding, support testing programs and help local districts meet the new minimum standards for public schools.

Bigler was hired to fill a position left open when the Director of Curriculum and Testing left to accept another position.

Before he became the development services specialist, Bigler worked for the IED under a Title X grant helping local school districts set district educational goals, one of the requirements for the new minimum standards.

Prior to his IED employment, Bigler worked on a district goal setting project at Rural Dell School and as an elementary teacher at Clarkes School near Mulino.
