Board delays sports study

Study of a blue ribbon committee's report on sports and activities at Mt. Hood Community College has been scheduled for two board meetings in May. The board heard a preliminary report on the citizen's committee findings last Wednesday from chairman Clem Eischen. Eischen said the group had spent more than 650 hours in its study. He also said a chief finding of the group was that the role of the community college must be more clearly stated to the citizenry. He said there was an alarming number of misconceptions voiced as to what a community college is. College Board Chairman Rick Gustafson said the complete and thorough job recently completed by the study committee deserved, in return, a careful examination by the board. Gustafson suggested the work of the board be split into two sessions. It was recommended and decided upon that one session include the philosophy behind the report and recognition of the minority report. The second meeting would consider the findings relating to tuition waivers. The report is generally favorable to sports and activities at the college and recommends no major changes. It does put a greater emphasis on confining recruitment of students to the Northwest, with particular direction toward in-district students.

Energy Expo slated

Energy conservation and alternative energy uses in the home will be the central themes of Clackamas Community College's Experimental Energy Exposition Friday and Saturday, May 13 and 14, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Among the displays will be a methane gas-from-waste products system; various types of solar collectors, including one made of recycled materials; an electric car distributed by Cleve Bennett of Portland; blue prints of energy efficient homes; and the Portland Recycling Team demonstrating recycling techniques for the home. There will be additional workshops on making storm windows, solar home construction, adapting the automobile to propane and how to live comfortably on less energy.

A highlight of the exposition will be a race between the solar collectors on display to determine which is the most energy efficient at the lowest cost. The Clackamas Community College physics department, which is sponsoring the event, hopes visitors will become directly involved in the exposition's displays and workshops. There are still also spots available for those who have alternative energy or energy conserving devices, displays or workshops.

For more information contact Clackamas Community College, 656-2631, Ext. 208.

Anglers untangle lines for trout season start by Douglas Gantenbein staff reporter

One of the few things surer than death and taxes will be upon us this Saturday. What's that, you ask? Why, opening day of trout season, of course. That means it's about time for all you would-be anglers to untangle your lines and sharpen your hooks. According to the Fish and Wildlife Department, early season fishing prospects are very good despite the drought, as many streams normally high and turbid early in the year are in good shape. There are several areas not opening until later, and some regulation changes, so anglers who have any questions should take a look at the 1977 fishing synopsis, available wherever fishing licenses are sold. In the Portland area, lakes and reservoirs that will be stocked include North Fork Reservoir, Timber, Harriet, Roslyn, Faraday and Benson lakes, and the pond at Mt. Hood Community College. The upper Sandy River and its tributaries will not be stocked until May due to cold water. Anglers are also reminded that the Sandy River below Brightwood Bridge is closed to trout fishing until July 1. As an extra bonus for local anglers, the Sandy Fire Department will once again have their two day Fisherman's Breakfast from 6 p.m. Friday to noon Saturday. The breakfast, at the fire hall, will feature all-you-can-eat portions of pancakes, eggs, sausage and coffee. There will also be a door prize of a color television. The breakfast is one of the two main fund raisers sponsored by the Sandy firemen. The proceeds are used to help finance scholarship, the fire auxiliary at Sandy High School and a Boy Scout troop. All fishermen and non-fishermen are invited, and there are admission rates for both individuals and families.

Lot division requested

James E. Montgomery, of 4464 SE Kleinsmith Road in Sandy has placed a request before the Board of County Commissioners to divide a 10 plus acre parcel into two five acre building sites for single family residence. The request will be reviewed at the next meeting of the County Commissioners, Monday, April 25 at 9 a.m. in Room 201 of the Clackamas County Courthouse.
