CBN CORNER

by David M. Hazard

Her first 14 books, including 'Christie' and 'A Man Called Peter,' have charmed readers around the globe and won her lasting acclaim as one of America's best-loved writers. Her works have sold in excess of 16 million copies. She was the wife of a famous U.S. Senate chaplain who met a tragic early death. Yet, she describes her life as "a fairy tale—a dream come true." She is Catherine Marshall LeSourd.

But with all the high points and tragic moments she has already faced, Mrs. LeSourd is not about to rest on past laurels. She discussed her newly-released 15th book, her current work and major projects ahead during an interview with Pat Robertson, host of the Christian Broadcasting Network's internationally syndicated talk show 'The 700 Club.'

The program is broadcast in Taiwan, Japan, Indonesia, the Philippines, Puerto Rico and most countries in Central and South America. It is broadcast over 130 television and 130 radio stations and 4,000 cable systems throughout the U.S. and Canada.

Mrs. LeSourd told 'The 700 Club' audience that her new book, 'The Helper' was actually begun about 30 years ago and came from a study undertaken by her and Peter Marshall, her first husband. Though not an autobiography in the strict sense, the book is "based on experience," which she claims is the key to the success of all her other works. Many bookshops are hard pressed to keep her books in stock. She concedes that the latest book reveals the secret of her own great personal strength.

"Life today is full of problems—difficult complexities," Mrs. LeSourd said. "Everyone needs a 'helper.'"

'The Helper' was published by Chosen Books, a group begun by Mrs. LeSourd and her husband Leonard in the basement of a 100-year-old school house in northern Virginia. From this humble beginning, such staggering best-sellers as Chuck Colson's 'Born Again' and Corrie Ten Boom's 'The Hiding Place' have sprung. A supportive community has evolved around Chosen Books in its quiet locale.

Mrs. LeSourd revealed that she is currently writing a new novel, her first fiction work since the popular 'Christie.' While it will not be a sequel to 'Christie,' ("Sequels are often disappointing, no matter who writes them."), it will follow her proven formula and be based on "experience." This time they are personal experiences from her own girlhood.

But the future project most dear to her heart is a film version of 'Christie.' Mrs. LeSourd is enlisting the prayers of her vast audience in this effort, "much in the same way we banded together when we produced 'A Man Called Peter,'" she said. That "banding together" caused a stir in the movie world and resulted in a much-loved motion picture.

"Movie rights for 'Christie' were bought by a major Hollywood film company. It was scripted and cast. Opening scenes were shot. The story really has everything—romance, adventure, a strong plot. Then a new manager took over the company and decided to shelve it along with eight or ten other films already in production. He opted for films with more violence and strong sexual overtones."

"Now, someone else is interested in making the film," she said. "But it may be quite some time before the technical involvements with the rights have been straightened out."

She is a woman whose thoughts and writings have touched millions, an unassuming woman for whom the word "excellence" is redundant. She is Catherine Marshall LeSourd.
