

Reynolds' trial set; Nored delayed

Jake Clarence Reynolds of Eagle Creek, pleaded not guilty Monday morning to charges of murder, aggravated felony murder and first-degree robbery in the shooting of a patron of Irene's Tavern in Sandy. His trial is scheduled for Aug. 14.

Jerry L. Nored, 25, Sweet Home, has been indicted on charges of murder and first-degree robbery. Nored has requested a bail hearing, delaying his arraignment. The hearing is set for June 26.

Reynolds, 27, and Nored are being held in separate jails, a common practice for co-defendants, according to a spokesman for the Clackamas County District Attorney's office.

The charges are in connection with the shooting death of Kermit Carney, 52, Portland, who died of a single gunshot wound shortly after two hooded men, one armed with an automatic rifle, allegedly attempted to rob Irene's Tavern.

Sheppard receives education award

The Oregon chapter of the National Conference of Christians and Jews reached out of the city of Portland for the first time in the history of its annual awards presentation to select Sandy's Judy Sheppard for the "How Big is One" education award Tuesday night.

The award is one of eight given to civic leaders in the Portland area for outstanding contribution to community service. Sheppard received the award for her work as coordinator of the Mt. Hood-Sandy Community School.

"I don't think they could have found a more deserving person for the award," said Margaret Gratton, director of Community Education and Services for Mt. Hood Community College.

"Judy is a people connector," she added.

Sheppard received the award at the annual Oregon NCCJ banquet Tuesday night. This is the fourth year for the

"How Big is One" awards but the first in which the organization has gone beyond the immediate Portland area to confer the honor.

NCCJ also presented awards for contributions in the field of social service, religion and administration of justice.

In making the presentation, awards committee chairman Silvia Rea cited Sheppard's efforts at organizing numerous programs and workshops in the Sandy area through the Community Schools.

"(She) is known as 'The Community Schools Lady' in Sandy," Rea said. "And her combination trailer-office-classroom has become known as the civic center of Sandy."

Through the Community Schools program, she has brought people of all ages and socio-economic status together to experience and share the joys of enrichment," Rea added.

Vandals strike

Youthful vandals did $3000 damage to a car owned by Paul D. White, 36343 S. Hauglum Road, Sandy, Sunday afternoon.

A witness, George Belton, was logging on Webber Road 1.6 miles south of Highway 26, when he heard laughter and the sound of metal being struck through the woods.

Belton told Clackamas County sheriff's deputies that two boys, who looked 15 or 16 sped off on their motorcycles as he approached. Deputies found the car with the rear wheels removed, the bottom badly damaged, the radio missing, and the dashboard smashed in.

Belton told deputies both boys were short. One, he said, wore a red helmet and rode a red motorcycle, the other wore a black and red helmet with gold trim, and rode a yellow motorcycle. Neither motorcycle, he said, had license plates.

Deputies reported that White's car was towed to Sandy.

U.S.D.A. seeks to ban 'junk food'

The rising furor over whether to prohibit the sale of "junk food" in school cafeterias should have no effect on Sandy Union High School, according to SUHS Superintendent Dr. Jack Peters.

"Our food all comes from vending machines," said Peters. "We're not part of federal subsidization. It (the proposed ban) will have no impact on our operation."

The U.S. Department of Agriculture was given the authority last November to prohibit in schools the sale of food items that the department determines do not make a "positive nutritional contribution in terms of their overall impact on children's diets, dietary habits and appetites."

The U.S.D.A. is considering the prohibition of candy sales, soda pop, frozen desserts and chewing gum in school cafeterias until after the last lunch period.

Before making a decision, U.S.D.A. officials are evaluating the opinions of students, parents, administrators, nutritionists and others. The deadline for public comment (originally June 9) has been extended to June 23 because of the large volume of letters received, according to U.S.D.A. Assistant Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman.

Written comments on the proposal should be submitted to Margaret K. O'Glavin, Acting Director, School Programs Division, Good and Nutrition Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington D.C. 20250.

Voters to decide SUHS, other levies

by MARK FLOYD

Area voters will go to the polls Tuesday for the third time this year to decide whether or not to support the funding level for Sandy Union High School as submitted by the school board.

The June 27 election will be the third alternative offered to voters who will be asked to approve a three-year rate of $5.76 per $1,000 of assessed value on taxable property. The funds generated by the levy are estimated to be $1,749,312 in fiscal year 1978-79.

The total school budget approved by the board is $2.7 million. The local share comes to $1,667,853.

Two other methods of funding the budget were rejected by voters in previous elections. Voters turned down a $1.4 million levy on April 4 by 531-467 margin in a light voter turnout.

The second election (the May 23 primary) sought to erase the existing tax base set over 50 years ago. However, voters rejected the important one, according to current base of $248,000 (including 6 percent annual increases) with a new base of $1,987,853.

The June 27 election is an important one, according to SUHS Superintendent Dr. Jack Peters. If the serial rate levy is defeated, the budget may have to be trimmed.

"I'm firmly convinced that the budget we've submitted is a need-to-have budget," he said. "It is a tight one."

"The people of Sandy have always supported the high school," Peters continued. "They know that we have to fund the school to keep it operating."

The $5.76 rate being submitted to voters is 54 cents higher than the 1977-78 rate, but 12 cents lower than 1976-77 and 67 cents lower than in 1975-76.

approve a $2.5 million levy for MHCC operations in 1978-79. The figure, which represents 20 percent of the MHCC budget, does not provide for buildings.

Should the levy fail, the MHCC budget would face a substantial reduction which would lead to fewer classes, services and teachers, according to Dr. R. Stephen Nicholson, president of MHCC.

"Because of a reduction of classes and services, we would anticipate a loss of students attending Mt. Hood and a corresponding loss of federal financial aid dollars and purchasing activity in this area," Nicholson said.

If the levy is approved, last year's tax rate of $2.20 per $1,000 evaluation will remain the same.

Other levies

The Bull Run School District is asking voters to approve an operating level of $146,480 for the 1978-79 fiscal year.

The figure is an increase of $44,000 over the amount of local taxes paid last year. Reasons for the increase include the purchase of a new school bus, a 22 percent increase in students, inflation, and the need to fill one and one-half new teaching positions.

Two candidates are running for director of the Bull Run School District. Jack E. Layton, Sr. and Cathleen Quiett are seeking the position which as a four-year term.

The Cottrell School Board is also seeking approval of its operating levy. The amount sought ($267,359) is $52,000 more than the amount financed by local taxes last year, but the new tax rate would be slightly lower.

The levy is to maintain current educational standards, to develop a program for problem learners and a program for accelerated learners, to provide maintenance for the physical plant and to adjust faculty and staff salaries in accordance with teacher contracts.

MHCC levy

The fate of the Mt. Hood Community College budget is also in the air pending the June 27 election.

Voters from Clackamas, Multnomah and Hood River Counties will be asked to
