Sandy High helps handicapped kids

Officials at Sandy High School have given notice that students with handicaps in nine categories will be served at the school under federal law.

The nine categories are: mental retardation, hard of hearing, deaf, visually impaired, speech impaired, serious emotional disability, orthopedically impaired, other health impaired or other learning disability.

To determine if a student in any of the above categories might be better served by special programs, diagnostic testing is often necessary.

Parents are notified if their child has been placed in a special class after diagnostic tests are given. However, parents may exercise their right to disallow testing of their child. Parents who wish to disallow such a test may call the curriculum vice principal's office at 668-4151 to secure the proper form.

Smoke alarm saved lives

The Sandy fire department has some startling statistics on home fires. But to Debra Cary and husband, Richard, they are not just impersonal facts and figures — they are chilling reminders of a very close call.

Mrs. Cary was awakened from a sound sleep at midnight Sept. 1. "At first I didn't know what woke me up," she said. "I was so groggy I didn't realize the sound came from our smoke detector alarm. Then I opened the bedroom door and smoke poured in."

Her first impulse was to call the fire department but she was so disoriented she had difficulty reading the numbers on the telephone dial. It wasn't until after she had taken the baby outside that she realized the flames were coming from the kitchen.

The fire started in a baby bottle sterilizer Mrs. Cary had left on her kitchen range before taking a morning nap with her two-week-old infant. "When I put the sterilizer on, I didn't intend to fall asleep," she said. "I don't even remember lying down. The baby had been keeping me up nights, and I was sleeping so soundly I'd never have awakened without the smoke detector."

Mrs. Cary says she has no doubts the alarm device saved her life and her baby's. Oregon State Fire Marshall Clyde Centers agrees. Centers estimates that 60-70 percent of all fatalities in home fires could be prevented by smoke detectors.

That message is apparently catching on with the American public. Last year, smoke detectors were one of the two leading Christmas gift items. The Sandy fire department has sold 200 of the devices over the last two years.

Sgt. Jim Gallagher from Sandy's fire district reports that fatalities from residential fires have been 50 percent lower in 1978 than in previous years.

"We definitely attribute this to the increased use of smoke detectors," he said. Approximately two-thirds of all fire-related deaths are from asphyxiation, Gallagher said.

Women's Club, a new location. This is a service for anyone 60 years of age or older, and provides extensive medical check-ups, both by examination and testing.

Only 10 people can be taken in each clinic only by appointment (in our area every two months), so call now if you are interested. Maxine Worley, 622-3331, can tell you more or set up an appointment.

In case you hadn't heard, it at Government Camp last Sunday. Guess we can really give up on summer and get our skis out.

'Dr. Kom Poot'

PIONEER REAL ESTATE recently installed a computer to provide staff and customers with information on property in the area. Dale Nicholls (seated), Herb Fenwick (center) and Darrell Demster type an information request into the keyboard terminal and await a reply from a computer bank in San Diego, via a Portland phone number. Oregon Multiple Listings recently hooked up to the San Diego computer which allows Pioneer to get instant information on most property carried by the listing service. Nicholls calls his computer "Dr. Kom Poot," and claims that "Doc" has instant recall, but is sometimes a bit of a smart aleck when discussing area property with local realty agents.
