

Broadword resigns as roads chief

Don Broadword, head of Clackamas County's Road Department for the past 12 years, has resigned to accept a new position in Spokane, Wash.

Broadword leaves his position as operations director for Clackamas County March 7 to become fleet manager for the city of Spokane.

Clackamas County Commissioners accepted his resignation from the $36,000 per year job earlier this month. His duties with the county included managing roads, bridges, parks, and purchasing of equipment. In Spokane, he will oversee the purchase and operation of city vehicles including garbage trucks and buses.

Although he has been a Clackamas County resident for more than 20 years, the Primeville native says he is looking forward to getting back to a drier climate, and "I think Spokane is a very progressive city."

"Certainly the highlight of my 16 years with the county was the 1964 flood. There was the challenge of helping people who were stranded by bridges and roads that were washed out."

In explaining his acceptance of the Spokane job, Broadword said that his county position has lost some of its challenges. "The longer you're there, the harder it is to improve on things. And things are going well in the county right now and in my department. I feel good about that."

In addition to his work with the county, Broadword served on the Gresham Union High School board from 1972 to 1977, and on the Orient Grade School from 1967 to 1973. In addition, he has been responsible for the county's self-insurance program for the past two and one-half years.

County Commissioner Robert Schumacher said Broadword's position will have to be filled through Civil Service testing. But because Broadword is familiar with everything from the county's self-insurance program to road equipment and street maintenance, finding a successor won't be easy, he said.

"You don't want to be over-laudatory, but the guy is darn near irreplaceable," Schumacher said.

ESD receives service okay from districts

The school boards of the 28 school districts in Clackamas County have voted to approve Clackamas Education Service District's resolution services for the coming school year, according to ESD Superintendent Anton A. Bryant.

Bryant said that under state law the local school district boards must approve the ESD services before they can be offered for the next year. If the local boards don't approve the service programs, they are cancelled. The purpose of the system is to insure that the services respond to local district needs.

To be approved, two-thirds of the boards have to vote to keep the service, Bryant said. As an added guarantee that services meet the needs of the greatest number, the districts that approve the services must represent over half the county's students.

Service programs covered by the resolution process are: the Mentally Retarded — Developmentally Delayed and Autistic program, the Child Evaluation and Service Center, the Regional Transportation program, the Student Assessment program, and the Educational Media Service.

The Mentally Retarded program is for trainable mentally retarded, multiply handicapped, and autistic children. The Child Evaluation and Service Center tests children for a variety of learning and perceptual disabilities. The Regional Transportation program helps county school districts provide for students with other problems such as hearing and vision handicaps.

Rock 'n' roll

There was fun for all ages at the Rock and Roll Jamboree Day held last Thursday at St. Jude's Home. Residents of St. Jude's and Orchard Crest rocked their rocking chairs and rolled their wheel chairs to raise money for the American Heart Association. Along with ransoms and bails paid for unsuspecting victims the week before, the benefit raised more than $425.

Ullman favors revenue sharing

by DAN DILLON
Despite hinting that the federal government should re-examine its policy regarding local assistance, Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., told Sandy officials that he supports continued general revenue sharing.

Ullman told a town meeting last Tuesday that the government is going to have to learn to say "no" soon to local municipalities seeking assistance. He said that would be one way the government could begin its struggle to balance the federal budget.

"Everyone has to share in cutbacks, no one is exempt," he said. Those cutbacks would come in specific programs, he said. Local governments have done a good job with general revenue sharing. Under that program, no specific strings are attached to funds. Local governments can do with those monies what they want.

City Manager Roger Jordan told The Post, "The federal government sets standards that cities have to comply with. If no more money is available, the government ought to withdraw the sewer and water guidelines." That is the message he said he gave to

Social gambling dead here

Social gambling is dead in Sandy.

Monday evening the Sandy City Council voted unanimously to accept the recommendation of the committee that studied the topic. After review by the committee, it was concluded that the city council reject any effort to allow social gambling in Sandy.

The committee, in its resolution, said that gambling is already allowed privately according to state law. Social gambling, the committee said, would not financially benefit the city and could "attract crime and vices that follow big money."

The council also unanimously endorsed a resolution establishing a special election for March 25.

That will authorize a levy of $270,392.17 outside the six percent limitation allowed by law.

As a result of council action, the city will purchase a flat bed truck for the Public Works Department. The truck will serve to relieve the dump truck currently in service. The council accepted a bid from Carlson Chevrolet of Sandy.

Obituaries

Walter Radford

Walter Radford died in a Grants Pass hospital Wednesday, Feb. 13, of a heart attack. He was 70.

Born Aug. 23, 1909, in the Sandy area, he spent most of his life here and in the Canyonville area.

He was an ardent outdoorsman and rock hound, and was very interested in gold mining.

He was an aviation metalsmith in the U.S. Navy during World War II and was in Guam for one year with the Civil Service.

He was the youngest of the 13 children of Dick and Cora Radford.

Survivors include his wife Sandra; four daughters, Gena Clowers, Murlaine Garrett, Kathy Ellison and Joyce Merrill; one brother Homer of Myrtle Creek; 12 grandchildren; four great-grandchildren, and many nieces and nephews.

At his request, no services were held.

At Zig Zag

Development debate goes on

Another go-around is scheduled next week in the continuation of the hearing involving Zig Zag Village's attempt to obtain a waiver of the Subdivision and Partitioning Ordinance.

The hearing will be Wednesday, Feb. 27, at the Clackamas County Courthouse at 9 a.m.

Jack Armstrong proposed to develop in phases a 192-unit subdivision and condominium development. That has received prior conditional use approval. The development will include 131 lots and 61 condominiums.

Armstrong proposed to obtain a waiver of the portion of the Subdivision and Partitioning Ordinance which requires all public roads be county roads.

The item was approved by the Clackamas County hearings officer June 20, 1979. The County Board of Commissioners, upon hearing the item on appeal Sept. 24, remanded the item to the hearings officer for further testimony. Since that time there have been a number of hearings without resolving the situation.

The location is on both sides of Lolo Pass Road surrounding the existing development of Zig Zag Village at the end of Snow Cap Way, Smith Loop and Village Loop Road, in the Lolo Pass area.

Also on Wednesday's agenda is an application, filed by Don F. Juhr, to major partition approximately 10.43 acres into two parcels. The two parcels would contain approximately 5.3 acres each.

A nonfarm use permit (NFU-26-79) has been approved for this property on the south side of SE Wildcat Mountain Drive. It is approximately one-half mile east of its intersection with Kleinsmith Road, in the Sandy area.

This hearing is scheduled to begin at 10:30 a.m.

County gets emergency loans

Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., announced this week that five Oregon counties have been declared emergency loan areas by the Farmers Home Administration as the result of January's heavy snow and ice.

"These loans will help qualifying farmers who suffered extensive damages and losses to their crops, timber, barns, greenhouses and farm machinery," Ullman said.

The counties covered by the emergency loan designations are Clackamas, Wasco, Hood River, Columbia and Multnomah.

HIWAY 26 AT WEMME

"Thank you!"

The Society of St. Paul and St. Jude's Home wish to publicly acknowledge the following unselfish and dedicated employees who, during the January ice and snow storm, remained at the facility day and night working extra shifts to ensure the continuation of our high level of patient care:

- Joyce Samsel, Assistant Administrator
- Louise Smith, Director of Nurses
- Marilyn Adams
- Gudrun Carter
- Caroline Cobb
- Frances Dishman
- Carla Hilstad
- Katherine Hoover
- Barbara Hunter
- Marilyn James
- Joanne Rathke
- Christeen Stanton

A special thank you must also be extended to all of our other employees who reported for their regular shift duties even though it was very difficult to travel from their homes to the facility.

We also wish to acknowledge the community support that was given by friends and neighbors in the Sandy area. We wish to particularly thank the following:

- Jim Gallagher and the entire Sandy Fire Department
- Dick Rasmussen, Timberline Electric
- Tom Day, City Engineer
- Roger Jordan, City Manager and Sandy Emergency Services
- Paul Koch and Jim Morgan, and their families, of Paul Koch Ford Bumper to Bumper Auto Parts
- Francie Dishman
- Chuck Miller, Administrator, and Mike Patterson, Supervisor, Office of Health Facilities Licensing & Certification, State Board of Health
- Archie Mustard, Oregon Emergency Services
- Col. Fabian Nelson and Dick Merrell of the Air National Guard
- Mr. Rapp of Portland General Electric

The entire community of Sandy responded in a very positive way, and concern was expressed on every level of state and local government.

THANK YOU ALL
