AFD Raises the Titanic

'Raise the Titanic!' An ITC Films/Marble Productions co-venture. Directed by Jerry Jameson. Starring Jason Robards, Richard Jordan, David Selby, Anne Archer and Alec Guinness. Rated PG.

atomic attack. At a depth of 12,500 feet, the ship is down too far for divers. The only solution, however mind-boggling in concept, is to raise it! This Herculean project must be managed in absolute secrecy and somehow be accomplished despite the extreme rigors of northern climate, deadly interference from another nation also dedicated to securing the vital material, and by using technology not only still on the drawing boards, but in part not yet even conceived.

Monumental task
As monumental as the filming task was (there are those who claim it might have been easier to actually raise the ship than make the movie) were the brain-warping technical and logistical problems which proved to be inescapable during production.

A derelict steamship, the Athina, approximately the size of the giant Titanic, was located on the Greek coast, chartered for six months, and overhauled and outfitted as a floating set. A key sequence was filmed at one of the largest glaciers on the North American continent.

A mammoth tank holding nine million gallons of water was constructed expressly for the filming on the island of Malta, adjacent to another huge film production tank already situated there. Just one of several 'miniatures' used in the tanks was a 56-foot exact replica of the Titanic as she would appear on the sea bottom and after being raised—authentic down to the last rivet and built from original blueprints of the vessel. When finally photographed as a wreck, underwater lighting and photographic techniques developed expressly for this motion picture accomplished the film footage.

Bill Flemming College Football Maven

Bill Flemming, an ABC veteran for over 20 years, has been associated with the 'NCAA Football' series since 1960-61, when he was signed to handle the play-by-play.

Bill was hired in 1958 by Sports Program, Inc., the forerunner of ABC Sports, to announce the Big Ten Conference basketball 'Games of the Week' and two years later when ABC Sports came into existence, he took over as the college football announcer.

When 'ABC's Wide World of Sports' went on the air in April, 1961, Flemming and Jim McKay were the reporters for that initial telecast with Bill covering the Drake Relays. 'Wide World' has since become the longest running show on ABC-TV and Flemming has been a familiar fixture on some 500 segments.

As motor sports became more and more popular, 'ABC's Championship Auto Racing' made its premiere in 1970, and Flemming again helped to launch a successful series.

Another successful series

A noted after-dinner speaker and master of ceremonies, Bill was chosen in 1974 to be Toastmaster for the annual Congressional Dinner in Washington, D.C. honoring then Vice President Gerald Ford.

Flemming is a graduate of the University of Michigan, class of 1949 where he was sports director of the University Radio Network during his senior year in college and during the next five years he broadcast all Big Ten sports over that hook-up. After another four years at WWJ-TV in Detroit he received his first network assignments with NBC for the 1957 USGA Open Golf Championship and the NCAA College Football 'Game of the Week.'

In order to fulfill his busy schedule Bill files his own plane, a Beechcraft King Air (Jet-Prop) to many assignments. He is a fully qualified multi-engine and instrument pilot with more than 4000 hours in his log book. Whenever possible Bill takes three willing passengers; his wife, Barbara, who was his college sweetheart and classmate at Michigan; and their children, Lindy and Billy.

The Flemmings live in Bloomfield Hills, Michigan, and spend their summers on Lake Michigan at their home in Harbor Springs, Michigan.

CONFIDENTIAL REPORT: Lorimar Productions, which recently weathered a serious crisis during a salary battle with 'Dallas' star Larry Hagman, has big problems all over again. Dianne Kay, who plays Nancy on ABC's popular 'Eight Is Enough' series, which Lorimar produces, has balked at starring in an episode in which her character is successfully persuaded by a woman photographer to pose for a Playboy-like centerfold. According to a source close to the actress, Dianne felt that such an episode, no matter how discreetly shot, would reflect badly not only on her TV character but on her off-screen image as well. Lorimar will not comment or even explain why an admittedly family-oriented series would tread into such controversial waters, but an insider at the production office in Culver City, Calif., reveals that Lorimar is so upset by Dianne's stance that it has informed her agent, David Eidenberg, that either she does the episode as written—or else. At the moment, she has refused to make any public statements until she is given the OK by her lawyer. Erik Estrada's manager, Helen Azevedo, confirms that the 'CHiPs' star will trade in his motorcycle for some chaps when he stars in a big-budget remake of 'The Cisco Kid' for MGM early next year. Azevedo says Erik is quite eager to do the film, which will begin filming in March or April, when 'CHiPs' goes on its annual hiatus. Why is Erik so eager to play the Latin rogue whom Duncan Renaldo immortalized via a 1950's TV series? According to Helen, 'The Cisco Kid' offers Erik an opportunity to bring to the Big Screen a positive image of a Hispanic character. Secondly, Azevedo thinks the movie also will provide her client with a chance to display on screen what she calls his "overwhelming charm." Plans call for Erik to play 'The Cisco Kid' with tongue firmly planted in cheek.

CONSUMER NEWS WIRE: Hey, boss! Hey, boss! Herve Villechaize of TV's 'Fantasy Island' is headed down the aisle. He'll marry 23-year old actress Camille Hagen Sept. 5, four years after they met working on the TV series. He sketched her picture and they fell in love. The rest, as they say, is history. Says Villechaize, 37, "I'm numb." Says Hagen, "It's the biggest and most important thing that ever happened to me." "Allow your brain to do a somersault on itself and go off into a fantasy, which is a philosophy of Kenny Everett, whose madcap, manic, frantic, free-for-all British TV show, 'Kenny Everett Video Show,' does just that and then some. American audiences will get a taste of Everett's bizarre and batty balderdash on Mobil Showcase Network's 'Summershow.'

TV CLOSEUP: A healthful diet, plenty of sleep, lots of fluids and lots of exercise. That's how Sophia Loren stays beautiful and thin. "It sounds so simple and so basic, yet how many women are strict about their diet and exercise routine," says Sophia. "There are no special tricks and no shortcuts to being beautiful, just discipline and perseverance. But they pay off beautifully." Sophia will be in this country in the fall to introduce her new fragrance, 'Sophia, by Coty.' "I enjoy the security and stability of a daily routine," says Toni Tennille. "I am a Taurus and that's one of our characteristics. You could say that we enjoy being in a rut. For the last few years I've been living out of a suitcase for concert dates and nightclub appearances but now that I'll be taping my own variety-talk show every day, I can count on the stability of a routine." 'The Toni Tennille Show' is a production of The Hill-Eubanks Group, Inc. in association with Moonlight and Magnolias, Inc.
