

Every Saturday morning the coaches of Sandy High School put on a basketball clinic for youngsters and teach them the

Fundamentals of the game

The Sandy High basketball developmental clinic has met with great success over the past two years. Head coach Dennis Warren (top right) works with a young hooper on the proper techniques of shooting. One of Warren's own players, 6-4 center Bob Nippert, casts a critical eye on the form of young Ty Smith (above). Nippert and teammates Scott Hunt and Marvin Schaffer give some committee advice to another young charge (left) and the result is some fine shooting forms (far left). At the end of the day, a scrimmage between the boys and girls proved that the girls might be smaller but they could keep up with the guys (top left). The clinics will continue for three more weeks at the school, on Saturday mornings.
