Tax credit due solar users

Oregon homeowners and renters who install wind-powered, solar, or geothermal energy equipment for use in their residences are entitled to a federal tax credit of up to $4,000.

The credit, which directly reduces income tax liability, is based on 40 percent of the first $10,000 of qualifying expenditures. Formerly, the credit was 30 percent of the first $2,000 expended plus 20 percent of the next $8,000. Thus, the maximum credit has been raised from $2,200 to $4,000.

Examples of property that may qualify for this credit are solar roof panels, wind-mill generators, and geothermal wells. The costs of labor, on-site preparation, and installation are included in the cost. To qualify, the property must be new and have a useful life of at least five years. The manufacturer of the article or equipment should be able to notify the taxpayer of its qualification for the federal credit.

The basic $10,000 of cost available for the credit may only be used once for a residence. Taxpayers who have previously claimed a credit for the installation of renewable energy source equipment in their homes are only allowed a credit for the portion of the $10,000 that is unused. If the taxpayer moves to another home, however, the credit will be available for the new residence in the full amount.

In addition to the $4,000 credit for solar, wind, and geothermal equipment, a 15 percent credit is allowed for weatherization expenditures. This smaller credit is based on the first $2,000 spent for weatherization materials such as insulation, storm windows,
